BRITAIN'S COURSE JUSTIFIABLE ONE

EFFORT TO STIMULATE EMPIRE TRADE LOGICAL ONE

New York Press Comment on Imperial Conference Shows Lesson for the United States

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Commenting on the policy proposed at the British Imperial Conference in London to keep trade so far as possible within the Empire, The World today declares that the people of the United States are the last people in the world who could complain should Great Britain buy less from them.

"We have an economic policy today which invites exactly such a policy as the British are thinking about," says The World. "We have a policy aimed to make imports difficult. In a world where the United States must buy if they wish to sell we need not be surprised if the British answer our tariff against imports by a policy aimed to reduce our exports."

The Times also devoted an editorial to a discussion of the conference and, like The World, declares that in the proposal to develop imperial trade there is a hint for the United States that need not be labored.

Foreign Markets

"Today," continues The Times, "it is not only our bankers and manufacturers, but our farmers who awake to the need of securing foreign markets. Only this week representatives of the American Farm Bureau Federation went to the White House to recommend a great extension of United States loans to foreign countries so that they might be able to buy the surplus of our agricultural production."

"Ten years ago this would have been unpatriotic; now it is a commonplace. While Great Britain is preparing to cultivate her garden intensively, the United States must neglect her own. Perhaps the richest part of it lies overseas."

At Mansion House

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The members of the Imperial and Economic Conference were entertained at dinner last night in Mansion House by the London Chamber of Commerce. R. L. Barclay, chairman of the chamber, presided, and the company numbered about 350. Canada was represented by Hon. G. P. Graham, Minister of Railways, who responded to the toast "Imperial Communications."

As far as transportation of freight and passengers are concerned, Hon. Mr. Graham said, Canada was probably better equipped than any other country in the world per head of population. He described what Canada was doing in regard to aerial navigation and the wireless, remarking that care had to be taken that government owned wireless systems, where they existed, and the ones being operated privately, should work in harmony. After all the cable was a powerful means of communication between the different parts of the Empire, and had been a pioneer in welding the links of communication more firmly.

Mutual Sympathy

"We should learn to sympathize with each other," said Mr. Barclay, "and by so doing we shall be better off than if we were not." He said that the conference was a great step towards mutual sympathy, and that the economic conference would not deal with the serious problems in a sense of alarm, but with the firm intention of producing the most satisfactory results possible.

The Empire had proved the greatest organization in history, but today it was the greatest organization known in history for the preservation of the peace of the world.

Hon. H. Burton, of South Africa, urged that such questions as free trade and protection should no longer be a fetish, but should be decided on their merits.

"Man-Woman" Murder Suspect Is Released

CHICAGO, Oct. 4.—Fred G. Thompson, who for fourteen years has posed alternately as a man and woman, was acquitted yesterday of the murder of Richard Teemer, insurance broker, slain in a holdup last June by a smiling woman bandit. The jury deliberated nearly three hours and took four ballots.

Announcement of the verdict was greeted by cheers and disorder, while women in the courtroom stamped their feet in an effort to congratulate the "man-woman."

Immediately after his discharge from jail, Thompson re-assumed the feminine attire which was forbidden him while he was confined in jail and during the trial.

"RABBIT A LA KING" MAKES SAVORY DISH

Department of Agriculture Suggests Rabbit Farming as Profitable Industry for Canada

OTTAWA, Oct. 4.—Rabbit meat to the extent of one million pounds annually is imported by Great Britain. In 1920 one Canadian firm of furriers imported 600,000 rabbit skins. In France and Belgium and other European countries the breeding of rabbits is an important industry, and to some extent, also in the United States. Why not in Canada? Thus the Department of Agriculture in a 24-page booklet in which all kinds of information is set down about domesticated rabbits. The climate of Canada is particularly adapted to successful rabbit breeding. It is claimed, by reason of its dryness, and though market conditions do not yet warrant the establishment of exclusive rabbit farms, it is suggested that rabbits should be an excellent side line as a source of revenue.

People have been prejudiced against rabbits in Canada, it is asserted, because they have appeared on the market out of season, and often in an unattractive condition. But, it is added, experts in matters of diet have demonstrated beyond doubt that the meat of properly fed rabbits has a higher nutritive and digestive value than that of practically any other animal. An organizing division of the D.S.C.R. is quoted to the effect that milk-fed rabbits, fricasseed, excepting for the size of the cuts, could not be distinguished from very tender fowl. The broths of the rabbits, says this authority, is as savory as that of chicken, and "rabbit a la king" proved to be delicious. An analysis cited in the booklet gives rabbit meat 25 per cent of solid matter as against 23 per cent found in chicken meat, the rest being water. By feeding rabbits properly, furthermore, rabbit meat is stated to be economical.

The booklet explains how to choose the best rabbits for commercial exploitation, how to feed them, how to tend them when sick, how to house them, how to look after their breeding and marketing, and furthermore, how to skin rabbits and how to dress and tan the skins.

PROFESSOR BANDIT ELUDES THE POLICE

"Baldy the Barber," Wanted for Robbery, Has Completely Disappeared After Flight With Posses

SASKATOON, Oct. 4.—As if the ground had opened and swallowed him up, Wasyli Mackenzie, escaped desperado, former professor of law, and university and known as "Baldy the Barber," has eluded provincial police and posses of armed citizens in the Canora district.

A dispatch from the battlefield today said "Baldy" was not away last week after a great fight with Tadmore citizens, but had endeavored to get food not shown himself for several days.

The police still think he is hiding in the neighborhood. It is thought he has little if any ammunition left.

ENTOMBED MINERS BROUGHT TO SAFETY

Five of Workers Buried in Scotch Colliery Workings See Light After Nine Days in Shaft

FALKIRK, Scotland, Oct. 4.—Buried alive for nine days, five of the men entombed by an explosion in a coal pit near here on September 25 were recovered today. The men were brought to the surface in fairly good condition, and their remarkable escape from death has raised the hopes of the relatives of the other imprisoned men. The searchers today were redoubling their efforts.

The first thing the rescued men asked for was cigarettes. They said all they had to exist on was water after the first day when the supply of bread gave out. The pit they were in was flooded by the explosion, but they succeeded in crawling to a ledge away from the water and finally struck a passage where they got a current of air.

The pit belonged to the James Nimmo Company. Seventy-one men were entombed in it when the explosion occurred, but one party of twenty-nine men were rescued. Virtually all hope for the remaining men had been given up.

Nova Scotia Storm Causes Heavy Loss

HALIFAX, Oct. 4.—Latest reports of the effects of Monday's wind and rain storm describe the loss in three counties, Antigonish, Pictou and Colchester, of at least one hundred highway bridges, representing a total outlay of more than $100,000. Heavy damage to grain crops, which had been cut and stacked in these counties, is also reported.

Death of Wealthy New York Society Woman Mysterious

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y., Oct. 4.—Poison has been found in the kidneys of Mrs. Gertrude (Gorman) Webb, wealthy New York and Philadelphia society woman, and the Westchester County grand jury, it has been announced, will investigate her death, in an endeavor to discover if she was murdered.

Relatives of the dead woman have started a contest over the three wills which disposed of her estate, estimated to be worth between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000. The first will, made before her marriage to Charles Webb, on November 4, 1922, left her estate to relatives and to various institutions. The second, executed during her last illness, and composed of only ten lines, left her entire estate to her husband.

The third and last will, on which the contest will be based, was made out just before Mrs. Webb's death, and left unsigned by her, due to her weakened condition. This last document, which was refused by the Surrogate, offered the ground that an unsigned will could not be accepted even as evidence, left the greater part of the estate to the relatives, and also established a fund to care for a monument to the dead woman, which was to be erected in New York.

TRADE RELATIONS BEFORE CONFERENCE

Imperial Economic Gathering Deals With Wide Variety of Inter-empire Trade Subjects

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The Imperial Economic Conference sat today for two hours. It was officially announced afterwards that the conference, with a view to the development of mutual trade, had given preliminary consideration to the following matters:

- 1.—Mutual co-operation in respect of commercial services comprising matters relating to the provision of facilities for the extended use of the Dominions, India and the Colonies, of the British commercial, diplomatic and consular services and vice-versa.
- 2.—Removal of existing obstacles in connection with the admission of commercial travellers' samples in trade catalogues.
- 3.—Statistics relating to Empire trade.
- 4.—Imperial co-operation in respect of patents, designs and trade marks.
- 5.—Valuation of goods for customs duties purposes.

With the arrival of Premier Bruce of Australia tonight, the membership in the conference will be completed, and the delegates will be able to go ahead with the long programme of business.

Tomorrow, both conferences will meet. In the morning, Lord Curzon, secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, at the conference of Premiers, will give a further outline on foreign affairs, adding to that already given by Premier Baldwin.

Flight Records of U. S. Airmen Stand

PARIS, Oct. 3.—The International Aeronautic Federation has authoritatively accepted the flight and the distance records made by Captain Lowell Smith and Lieutenant John T. Rhoads, United States army aviators, on August 27-28, at Rockwell Field, San Diego.

In addition to the duration record of 37 hours, 15 minutes, 14.4 seconds, the Federation has recognized six speed records from 2,500 kilometers to 5,000 kilometers, and also the 5,300-kilometers long-distance flight. The previous endurance flight record, 34 hours, 5 minutes, 21 seconds, was held by Lieutenant Oakley Kelly and John MacIntyre, U.S.A.

Tells the Tale of A Good Tailor

"Murder Will Out" in a Week of Wearing a Coat

"We could save half the cost of tailoring a suit and pay for it by the loss of reputation," said the Chief Designer of Semi-ready clothes. "And we do not put one cent more of work into a coat than should be put in to make the garment give that custom-made service so desirable," said Harry Fuller, of Mearns & Fuller, on Douglas Street. "But the big difference between a Semi-ready coat and the cheaper kind shows itself in a week's wear. It's the better inside work, the hidden parts of a coat, that tell the tale of the good tailor." Can Europe Hold Together?

(Copyright, 1922, in U.S. and Great Britain by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)
By JOHN F. SINCLAIR

Chapter XIX—Russia Before Dawn

It is a huge country. It could swallow up the United States, France, Germany, Italy, Turkey, United Kingdom, Spain, Belgium, Switzerland, Austria and Hungary. That is hard to grasp.

But the area now controlled by the present government of Russia is larger than that. Russia would still have room enough left to add to those countries already mentioned an additional territory equal to all of Europe outside of Russia. If we can imagine ourselves getting on the train at San Francisco, and getting off the train at London, England, all the time in one country, that would give us an idea of the size of Russia. Russia today is more than two and a half times as large as the United States in area and contains 133 million people. That is what Russia has left after losing, since the war, Poland, Finland, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania, and Bessarabia to the Rumanians. She lost an area of 260,000 square miles, containing 25 millions of people.

Today the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic—the official name of the Soviet Government—is a federation of twenty-two independent political units. Much of the detail work of organization is carried out without any active participation by the Central Government at Moscow. The tendency of late has been for the Central Government at Moscow to release more and more power to these different independent units.

The Kerensky Regime

The old monarchy of the Czar was overthrown by the revolution of March 12, 1917. Czar Nicholas II was forced to abdicate, and Prince Lvoff became premier under orders from the Duma, the Russian national legislature. He was weak, and on August 6, 1917, he was succeeded by Alexander Kerensky as premier. During this time the peasants seized the lands and divided them up amongst themselves. Kerensky, a brilliant young attorney, had been a socialist advocate, but he tried hard to take a middle course ground and to please all groups. He failed. And on November 7, 1917, the All Russian Congress of Workingmen's Soldiers' and Peasants' Deputies finally seized the power. It was the military revolutionary committee of Petrograd which wrested the power from Kerensky.

Lenin and Trotsky, new names to the world, were lifted to power, and the dictatorship of the proletariat was set up for the first time in a great area in the history of the world. Immediately the new government withdrew from the World War and signed the Brest-Litovsk Treaty with Germany.

In addition to this new development, the All-Russian Central Executive Committee in January, 1922, passed a decree establishing a central agricultural commission, under the presidency of M. K. Kalinin, president of the Soviet Republic, with headquarters in Moscow, the present capital of Russia. The object of this commission is to increase production and to rehabilitate agriculture. So important in this work in the opinion of the Soviet Government that President Kalinin, himself, gives two hours a day to the hearing of all cases of dispute between peasants which the local authorities have not been able to settle. The government realizes that the contented agriculturist is its strongest weapon.

This policy has already had two important results. It has had the effect of bringing the great peasant class—80 per cent of the population—into sympathetic relationship with the Soviet Government of Russia. In the second place agricultural production has so far recovered that the authorities expect to be able to export about 75 million bushels of grain for this year, 1923, which grain they will exchange for agricultural machinery and other essential imports. Whether Russia is yet producing sufficient grain for all her people I am not able to say, but Russia must have certain imports like farm machinery to rehabilitate, and she will sell this year's surplus of her own country, the largest volume of grain since 1917.

Signs of Recovery
Since the NEP policy was introduced, two and a half years ago, the present Government of Russia has been growing stronger and more powerful. Agricultural production is increasing, the cities are showing increased life. I was in Russia in July and I saw old buildings being remodeled and painted, new plate glass fronts being installed in many stores in Petrograd and Moscow and other cities, streets were being repaired, and new street cars being installed. Stocks of goods in the stores were filling up rapidly and food was cheap and plentiful. At the Savoy Hotel in Moscow in July of this year I had a dinner consisting of vegetable soup, fish, fried chicken, potatoes, vegetables, a lettuce and tomato salad, ice cream, cake and coffee, for 35 cents.

Through it all, the Soviet Government has survived, until today the government of Lenin and Trotsky is not only the oldest, but, judged by all former standards, one of the strongest in Europe. At this time it is in a very strong position. The question, then, is: Can this government last? This we will take up in our next article.

Ambassador Silent On Resignation Rumor

LONDON, Oct. 4.—Ambassador Harvey today refused to discuss the subject of his resignation. When asked to confirm or deny a report from Washington that he was to leave London in November, he replied: "I can not say anything whatever about it."

Australia's Future

ADELAIDE, Oct. 4.—Lord Forster, Governor-General of Australia, in an address to the Commonwealth Club here last night, remarked that Australia might yet become the centre of the British Empire.

INSIST CHINA MUST FULFIL PROMISES

DIPLMATIC CORPS DEMAND IN-DEMNITY FOR OUTRAGES
Hold Government Is Responsible for Safety of Foreigners From Attacks by Brigands

PEKING, Oct. 4.—China's asserted lack of zeal in suppressing banditry and protecting foreigners was deplored by the Diplomatic Corps in a communication which it handed the Foreign Office today as a rejoinder to the recent note in which the Chinese Government refused to accede to all the demands made by the foreign powers as a result of the Lanchow bandit episode last May. In the rejoinder, the Diplomatic Corps maintained fully the promises taken originally that the national government of China was responsible for the safety of foreigners in all provinces—now called on the Government to carry out the measures suggested, which include heavy indemnities, punishment of provincial officials, reorganization of the railway guard and active measures against bandits.

A New Note

The new note insisted that the Lanchow outrage was directed against foreigners, despite the Chinese contention to the contrary. China's reply to the original demands agreed to compensate the kidnapped foreigners for their loss of time, inconvenience and privations, and stated that the matters of punishing negligent officials and improving the railway guard already were under way, but the document denied that the central government was culpable and declined to admit the right of the Diplomatic Corps to regulate the administration of the provinces or the protection of railroads.

CALL OF ADVENTURE TOOK STUDENT NORTH

Fellow Collegian of Allan Crawford, of Wanganui, Took Part in Expedition to King George Island

LONDON, Oct. 4.—An intimate sketch of Allan H. Crawford, the University of Toronto student who raised the British flag on Wrangell Island and took possession of the island in the name of King George V on September 12, 1921, and who perished, along with three companions while trying to get to Siberia from Wrangell Island, which the Canadian government has since been contributed to The Manchester Guardian by a friend and classmate of young Crawford, as follows: Crawford, a student of the University of Toronto, was a member of the Wrangell expedition of 1921, which was a polar expedition of commanding a polar expedition of Wrangell Island. He learned that Stefansson required men with scientific training for research in the north. Nor was there the lack of material. It was Dr. W. A. Parks, professor of the University of Toronto, who first suggested that Allan, one of his students, might communicate with the explorer. Crawford, who was a geologist, made records of minerals, rocks and fossils for use in connection with the main expedition to follow in two or three years' time.

Lure of Adventure

A chat which we had together after completing our third year examinations in 1921 illustrates his attitude. The Canadian student's concern in the long vacation of four months is what he can find to do rather than where he is going. Allan had a rather startling idea. Producing a telegram from Stefansson, he said: "Here's what I am thinking of. It will probably take two or three years, but it's the chance of a lifetime. The disadvantage is that people who go on these expeditions usually return with their digitations ruined." Three years of university life had changed his viewpoint. Here was a chance which differed from the usual grind of civil service or commercial life.

"I find I can't concentrate as I could in school," Allan told me. "I'm restless. Perhaps I would be able to settle down after a couple of years of this sort of thing."

Crawford was young—just 20 at the time; a couple of years would stabilize his ideas, and then he would return to finish his B.A. course. He was undertaking a sort of extended trip to gain experience. He did not need to expose himself to Arctic perils for the sake of making a name. He would have done that in any case. When he matriculated from University of Toronto Schools in 1918 he captured not one, but several scholarships in mathematics and science. His university record in the honor geology course gave great promise. But he doubted whether it was worth while—he wasn't satisfied.

Lad of Many Parts

Allan Crawford is a native of Hamilton, Ontario, although Toronto claims him as her own. Things he learned when a boy. Scott in the former city were probably his first preparation for his Arctic activities. When the Normal College was moved from Hamilton to Toronto, Professor J. T. Crawford and family followed, and Allan and his young sister went to school there.

Everybody at the university in 1921 knew Allan R. Crawford—a tall, dark and handsome youth. His humor was of the jerky, spontaneous variety—the sort which makes you laugh in spite of yourself. He was one of the triumvirate who inaugurated "Gobbin," a Toronto comic journal which has grown from a university magazine into an international monthly with a large circulation in Canada and the United States.

The Best Medicine for Women

When Mrs. Myers, of Winton, North Carolina, stepped into the drug store and asked his drug-gist for the best medicine he had in his store for women's ills, it is no wonder he was handed a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Mrs. L. K. Myers in writing of it says: "I had been weak, run down and had a pain in my left side for a long time, so I could not do my work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me in a short time so I was able to do all of my housework, including washing and ironing, and now I feel fine all the time." As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound holds the record for benefiting 98 women out of every 100 women who take it, it will pay every suffering woman to try it. (Adv.)

ONE OF OLD PIONEER RESIDENTS IS CALLED

Late Mrs. Helen Swanwick, Daughter of "Laird" Weir, of Sooke Harbour and William Head

Recently there passed away at Vancouver one of the oldest pioneer settlers of Vancouver Island, Mrs. Helen Swanwick. Deceased was born in Scotland seventy-four years ago, and came out to the Pacific Coast of British Columbia when a child with her father, and lived most of her life in the Sooke and Metchoin districts.

The late Mrs. Swanwick was the daughter of Mr. Weir, generally known as the "Laird," of Highland Scotch descent. Mr. Weir came to Vancouver Island in the service of the Hudson's Bay Company in 1831, and was the first shepherd employed by the company to look after the sheep brought to this coast. Some years after his arrival he retired from the Hudson's Bay service, and took up land in the neighborhood of Sooke Harbour, where he was one of the first settlers. He engaged in sheep raising there.

He had a family of four sons and two daughters, who spent the early part of their lives in the Sooke district. For many years the family defended their home, a well-built log house standing between two high rocks, equipped with two cannons, which at all times were kept loaded in case of attack by Indians. Since those early days the Indians who lived there have disappeared, and a single relic of the tribe is left today.

Motor roads now traverse the country where a single uncertain trail was once the only means of access, except by water, which was crossed in Indian canoes.

After spending a good many years at Sooke, Mr. Weir moved to a new location at William Head, now the site of the Quarantine Station, where he raised sheep which he sold in Victoria, transporting them in canoes. In the fishing season the Indians came to the shore, and often over a thousand Indian fishermen were camped around his farm and in the vicinity of Race Rocks. Occasionally, when "fire-water" was secured, the Indian warriors became dangerous, and grave risk was run by the hardy white settlers.

Among such environment was the girlhood of the late Mrs. Swanwick. When a young woman she married Mr. Thomas Swanwick, then secretary to the Attorney-General of British Columbia. A son, Mr. Robert Swanwick, and two daughters, Mrs. Fienhard and Mrs. Maxwell, survive the old pioneer family.

The late Mrs. Swanwick was best known for her cheery and kindly spirit. There must have been many residents of the island who remember the kind hospitality and welcome which they found in the old "Laird" home at Metchoin, the first house built in that district, over which Mrs. Swanwick presided for over fifty years.

Her passing took from the Coast the last of the British pioneers who came out to the new land with its unknown perils, in the fifteen under the auspices of the Great Company, and with her long happy record, she will be missed by many of the younger generation who were so fortunate as to claim her friendship.

Following her death at Vancouver, the remains were cremated, and the ashes scattered over the family burial plot in Metchoin Church cemetery.

There passed away at St. Joseph's Hospital on Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 4, 1923, at 10:30 a.m., Lieut. George Henry Liffon, R.N.V.R., 525 Oliver Street, Oak Bay, aged fifty-nine years, a native of England, and a resident of this city for the past twelve years. He leaves to mourn his loss his widow, three sons and three daughters.

During 1914 and 1915, the late Lieut. Liffon was at Esquimalt, and afterwards joined the Atlantic Coast patrol during the Great War. He was a member of the Sons of England Lodge, and had many friends here who will regret to hear of his demise.

The remains are being kept at the Thomson Funeral Home, 1625 Quadra Street, where the funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Members of the Naval Veterans' Association will attend the service.

Our Portrait is of Mr. C. F. WHEELER, of 22, Regent Street, Babbly, Devonshire, England, who writes:

"About two years ago I had a party second break out in my big toe. I had it attended to for about three months, but during that time it had spread to all the toes, with the result that I had to undergo an operation, but with no avail. Then, after another operation, as it was not getting any better, I thought I would give your 'Clarke's Blood Mixture' a trial. After taking the first three bottles I could walk better, and now after having nine bottles the wound has quite healed, and I am pleased to say I have not seen any sign of it breaking out since."

BANK DIRECTORS APPEAR IN COURT

CRIMINAL CHARGES FACED BY HOME BANK HEADS

Heavy Bail Fixed Pending Opening of the Preliminary Hearing Set for October 12

TORONTO, Oct. 4.—Adjournment until October 12 was made today in the hearings at the police court of the cases against ten directors and officers of the suspended Home Bank. All appeared in court except President H. J. Daly, who, it was stated, was detained through illness. A formal bench warrant was issued in his case, but it is understood that his bail will be renewed as it was for the others.

The following were the directors who appeared in court this morning: R. P. Gough, F. B. Russell, J. F. M. Stewart, S. C. Wood, all of Toronto; C. A. Barnard and Lieut.-Col. Clarence Smith, of Montreal; also A. E. Calvert, acting general manager; O. Smith, chief accountant, and Sydney H. Jones, auditor, all of Toronto.

When the name of Mr. Daly was called, T. P. Phelan, K.C., appeared to represent him, and produced a certificate from Mr. Daly's physician to the effect that the president was ill at his summer home and was unable to appear.

"That certificate will not satisfy me," said Assistant Crown Attorney Murphy, "and I ask for a bench warrant for Mr. Daly."

"That's just adding indignity to these proceedings," said Mr. Phelan. "It's not at all necessary in this case."

"It is absolutely necessary," retorted Mr. Murphy, "and I want the bench warrant issued."

Magistrate Jones consented to issue the warrant, but stipulated that it be not executed until October 12, when, if Mr. Daly is not in a fit condition to appear in court, the bail will be renewed.

Heavy Bail—Mr. Daly was bound over in the sum of $100,000; Mr. Gough, $100,000; Charles Barnard, $100,000; F. J. M. Stewart, $100,000; Lieut.-Colonel Smith, $50,000; S. C. Wood, $50,000; F. J. Russell, $50,000; A. E. Calvert, $25,000; Sydney Jones, $50,000, and C. L. Smith, $25,000.

Long before proceedings opened the courtroom and the corridors leading to it were filled with curious folk anxious to get a glimpse of the accused.

R. P. Gough, vice-president of the bank, and a director of the Canadian National Railways, first appeared. He looked straight at the magistrate, and appeared to feel keenly the part he was to play in the drama. On being formally bound over, he made hurriedly for the door leading to a side corridor. Outside, press photographers furiously dodged in his way and endeavored to snap him, but he was hustled away by friends.

Monks, Jones, Stewart and Russell moved among the crowd in the corridors and were known only to a few until they were called into the court. They, too, appeared worried, and answered the few questions put to them in a very low voice. Lieut.-Colonel Smith and C. A. Barnard, K.C., receded themselves in one of the crowd and waited for one of the crown attorneys and waited for one of the crown attorneys and waited for one of the crown attorneys.

"Orgy of Speculation"—TORONTO, Oct. 4.—In a leading editorial, The Globe says: "The statement as issued by the curator of the Home Bank concerning the assets and liabilities of the bank and the losses sustained and likely to be sustained by it during the process of liquidation provided a very strong case for very thorough and systematic bank inspection by Dominion Government examiners. It is incredible that the orgy of speculation in real estate, timber lands, veterans' scrip and mercantile ventures of a perilous sort could have proceeded unchecked had the judgment of an impartial bank examiner, responsible to the Finance Department, been available."

"The Home Bank was a bank only in name. The audit made for the protection of its shareholders was a farce. The bank took the money of thousands of small depositors and handed it over in huge sums to a few planning speculators and exploiters who were seeking to get rich quick, accepting as security for these loans the bonds and stocks of their companies or mortgages on street railways, timber lands, pulp mills and other business enterprises with which the directors of the bank were connected."

If criminal proceedings are to take the place of a public inquiry into the affairs of the Home Bank, occasion should be taken by Attorney-General Nickle to disclose the identity of the directors who have obtained and retained the six million dollars lost by the shareholders and depositors."

NOTORIOUS JEWEL THIEF IN THE TOILS

Leader of Gang Which Committed Sensational Raid on Gotham Home Caught in Paris

PARIS, Oct. 4.—Gabriel Alphonse Mourey, wanted by the New York police in connection with a sensational jewelry robbery in the home of Albert R. Shattuck in April, 1922, was arrested by the French police today.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—Albert R. Shattuck, retired financier, and his wife may now return to dwell in their brick colonial house in Washington Square, for with the arrest in Paris today of Gabriel Alphonse Mourey, alias Henri Boilat, the last of the gang which committed the sensational robbery has been removed.

Mrs. Shattuck's nerves were shaken after she, her husband and seven servants, had been locked in the wine cellar of their home on April 1, 1922, by five bandits led by Mourey, that she refused to live there longer with Mourey at large, and Mr. Shattuck closed his home, announcing it would not be reopened until the robber chief was rounded up. After that he personally led a world-wide search for Mourey, spending several months in Paris in the role of an amateur detective. The robbers obtained $200,000 worth of jewelry.

Mr. Carter Talks On Egyptian Art

Mr. Howard Carter gave a lecture before the Royal Scottish Geographical Society at Usher Hall, Edinburgh, recently, on the recent discoveries in Egypt. The Lord Provost, Sir Thomas Hutchison, presided over an audience of more than three thousand.

Dealing with the general subject of archaeology, Mr. Carter opened his lecture with some remarks as to its value in modern times. To compare ancient Egypt or the Valley of the Kings and all they had bequeathed to us with material discoveries such as those of steam and electricity would be ridiculous. But archaeological investigation showed that the harnessing of these powers to man's service was the only real advantage, apart from the science of medicine, which modern civilization could claim over ancient civilization.

Culture, in the domain of intellectual development and the arts, was in ancient days higher in many ways than it was today. As regards ancient Egyptian religious ideas, Mr. Carter said that anybody who studied them might find his interest absorbed by their curious medley of mythology, but in the end would recognize that we had progressed beyond them. On the other hand, people who acquired the power to understand the art of the ancient Egyptians would feel that we could not cherish the same sense of aesthetic progress.

Surprising Material
This fact was made manifest by the material found in the tomb of Tutankhamen. One was astounded by the immense productivity of the art of the period. The tales of Tutankhamen were rather those of an average young Egyptian than of an austere religious Pharaoh. In the case of utilitarian objects brought to light, for which art could not be considered as a necessity, they found it nevertheless to be the first consideration. Mr. Carter gave a short account of the history of Tutankhamen, touching on the probability of his co-regency with his father-in-law, Akhenaten. He called attention to the affinity in design between the tomb of Tutankhamen, that of Akhenaten at El Amarna, and the tomb of his successor, King Ay, who buried Tutankhamen.

A short history of the Valley of the Kings followed. Mr. Carter pointed out that this place first became the Royal Necropolis in the early part of the eighteenth dynasty—that is, during the reign of Thothmes I, 1,557 years before Christ—and that it continued to be used until the end of the twenty-first dynasty, 245 years before Christ. It was called "The Place of Truth, wherein are the great Seats of Silence." This awe-inspiring valley, as one entered it from the east, began at the northeastern end of the Theban necropolis, and after a circuitous route of about three miles and a half took a southerly direction under the main Libyan range of mountains. It had two tributary branches at its head, which were known as the eastern and western valleys, and it was at the head of these tributary branches that the Pharaohs made their graves. The place had a strange, solemn and almost gloomy character. Nature seemed to stand before us in all her majesty, and everything was calm and motionless.

Future Work in the Tomb
Mr. Carter went on to point out future work. Though they had removed from the antechamber some six hundred large and small objects, these represented only a quarter of the material in the tomb—that was, in the annex, the sepulchral chamber and the inner stone chamber. The task was one which would still require two or more years' work. The material yet before them was without doubt of greater interest and value than that which had been dealt with already. The task of the coming Winter would be the dismantling of the shrines within the sepulchre, and the examination of the royal mummy within its sarcophagus. He believed they would find not only the King intact, but also his crown and other regalia.

The lecture was illustrated by 145 lantern slides, in black and white and in color. These included pictures of the valley, the royal tombs, the opening of the tomb, and the clearing of the passage as the antechamber was entered. Among the objects shown on the slides were decorated boxes, caskets, the bouquet, the King's court sandals in gold and leather work, gold finger rings recovered from the robber's loot, the King's finger-stall, gloves and bedstead, magnificent carved chairs in ivory, ebony and other wood; the King's golden throne, his tools, statuettes, and statuettes; the King's wine-cup; shrines containing emblems, musical instruments, torches; the King's sceptre, ceremonial staffs, and walking sticks and staves; the opening of the sealed doorway leading to the sepulchral chamber and the work of transporting the objects found were also the subjects of illustrations.

TO DADDIE AT FIFTY-ONE

"In one of the happiest homes in England live a mother, three children and daddie; and daddie, having a birthday, found this poem by his eldest daughter on his breakfast table," says The Children's Newspaper.

"Dear daddie, you are fifty-one (Your handkerchief is new), The occasion seems to us to be A time for cheerfulness.

"How nice we think, you younger fry, How nice if at his age Our figures are as youthful and Our noddies are as huge.

"We'd like our case to be like yours (Except for wife and means), Gray matter that is well matured, A temper in its teens.

"We'd like to feel good work behind, And better work ahead, We'd like the faith that takes from life The sting of woe and dread.

"We'd like to have the kind of heart That shines right through the clay, And makes all little children friends, As your heart does today.

"We're grateful for your beacon, sir, And for our pleasant days, For youth and music, books, and flowers.

For teaching, help and praise.

How very much we feel this day You'll have to trust, and guess— We don't know how to give it, sir, A day of days to bless."

QUIET WEDDING HELD AT METCHOSIN CHURCH

Miss Margaret Cotton became bride of Mr. Christopher Pike, of Sooke, yesterday.

METCHOSIN, Oct. 4.—St. Mary's Church was the scene of a quiet wedding this afternoon when Miss Margaret Cotton, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Cotton, Crescent Road, Victoria, became the bride of Mr. Christopher Pike, only son of Mrs. Pike, of Sooke. Rev. S. Conley performed the ceremony. The bride wore a becoming dress of pink silk and handsome fur coat, with smart hat trimmed with silver. Only a few friends were present. After the ceremony the bride and groom left for Beecher Bay, where the honeymoon will be spent.

WEDDINGS

Collier-Smith
A very pretty wedding took place in San Francisco on September 22 at 7 p.m. when Mr. Allan Collier, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Collier, of 1430 Bay Street, Victoria, was married to Miss Margaret B. Smith, eldest daughter of Mr. Smith, of San Francisco, by the Rev. J. H. Rogers.

The bride was given away by her mother, and Mrs. C. Smith acting as matron of honor. The bride wore a pretty blue satin dress with corsage of georgette, with a girle of pearls, and hat en suite. The matron of honor was dressed in a black Canton silk dress trimmed with silver. The bride's gift to the groom was a stickpin. After the wedding the bride's mother gave a wedding supper, at which forty people were present, and after a brief honeymoon the couple will make their home in San Francisco.

Johns-Nobbs
The marriage of Mr. Frederick Clifford Johns, only son of Mr. and Mrs. John Johns, of Victoria, and Miss Emma Nobbs, fourth daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Nobbs, of Victoria, was solemnized at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. D. Black, Port Angeles, on Sunday evening, September 29, at 8 o'clock. The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. H. Rogers, while Mr. Rogers supported the groom. After a short honeymoon spent in Port Angeles, the happy couple will leave for Tacoma, where they will make their home.

This will be the first anniversary of Major the Rev. J. H. White's ministry at St. Columba, and as the two eminent clergymen were long associated together in the Vancouver Presbytery, the coming of Dr. Henderson at this time is a propitious event.

On the following evening, Monday, October 8, the Ladies' Aid Society of St. Columba, assisted by the Young People's Association, will hold a reception in the church parlors for Mr. and Mrs. Henderson in honor of the anniversary. Mr. Henderson will remain over to attend the reception, along with others of the Victoria clergy.

SATISFIED IF LEAGUE SUCCEEDS IN CENTURY

troubled world. There had been cheap derision concerning the League of Nations, but asked His Honor, if there were no association of nations for the prevention of war where would poor humanity turn?

So long as national governments, said Sir George, in opening an address of about an hour and a half, were in favor of the League it would work with harmony and success. In view of this it was desirable that every nation be permeated with the feeling that the League was not a mere formality, but a real and living organization, and be informed, as to what the League was doing. A society was being built up in Canada. The membership fee was only one dollar, and members received the literature of the society.

Formation of Branches
The aim, said Sir George, was to form one hundred branches this year, with a total of at least 10,000 members. He wanted Victoria to organize one and strive to secure 500 members. If this was done, he would feel that it was his duty to visit the city.

"I have just one purpose tonight," went on the speaker, "and that is to visualize the League of Nations as it is." He would deal with how the League was formed, how it operates and what it has done.

The League of Nations was not a new idea. In almost every age there had been thinkers of the opinion that by an association of nations the difficulties of the world might be settled with less cost and with greater effect than by the medium of war.

The war, not unexpected by those who had given attention to the course of things in Europe, had come, and there had been a feeling as to whether it was worth anything so costly, so destructive, so resultant in the upheaval of the best forces of humanity, must be preceded by some better method. So when the Peace Conference took place in 1919, there lay behind the delegates the idea of the League of Nations.

It stood now not only as the covenant of the League but as part of every treaty between the Allies and enemy powers.

"What did the formation of the League mark?" asked Sir George. "You must recollect that for 6,000 years the world went on the assumption that if nations had differences they should submit them to the arbitration of war. This was the rule, the method and the vogue that ruled the international affairs of the world for centuries."

A special committee, too, months to draft the covenant of the League of Nations and placed it before the world for suggestions. The covenant was finally adopted as the charter of the association of nations. It stood now not only as the covenant of the League but as part of every treaty between the Allies and enemy powers.

LECTURE AT SIDNEY

SIDNEY, Oct. 3.—A lecture on tuberculosis by Dr. Lamb, Provincial Traveling Medical Health Officer, in the Wesley Hall, was well attended and very interesting. Dr. Lamb, who was introduced to the audience by Dr. Manning, expressed his pleasure at seeing so many present, and especially the young people. He fully described the awful effects of tuber-

THE CHALETTERS

Cynthia Brent, country girl, living in a New York apartment she has inherited from an old lady she once befriended.

Ruby Allison, her gay and frivolous friend.
Alec Kerr, Ruby's fiancee.
Quentin Gray, an artist friend of Ruby's.

Aunt Ellen, who keeps house for Cynthia.

Murray Stewart, for whom Cynthia is working as a stenographer.

Mrs. Wakeland, friend and rich client of Stewart, who takes a fancy to Cynthia.

Violet Jerrold, friend of Murray's.

MIKE—An Unkind Fate

"G" was the word, for Mike Ruby was afraid, not like the lilies of the field, but like a flaunting poppy or a peony, in a shot-silk taffeta frock of green-laid mauve, her red hair crowned by a little toque of grapes and chiffon.

"Cynthia darling, I've the heavenliest invitation for you! Won't you dare refuse?" Her gloom had gone, and she was radiant.

"Quentin has invited me and me to a fascinating dance-club he belongs to, and he and a pal of his are calling for us both in half an hour!"

"Cynthia shrank back. 'I can't go. No, indeed, I can't! You must tell him.'"

An angry frown chased the sparkles from Ruby's face.

"You've got to go. The party's off, definitely, if you don't. Quentin made me promise that I'd get you. It's in your honor. He says you're having much too dull a time for a young girl in a big city, and this is his treat for you. Don't be so ungrateful and hermit-like!"

"Cynthia's lip trembled. She felt wretched over her refusal of Murray Stewart's invitation, and now that kind Aunt Ellen had gone out, she would be left alone, to mope, and think just how foolish and 'contrary' she had been."

"Dance-clubs aren't in my line at all," she began timidly.

"Oh, hush! The sooner you get accustomed up, the better! Come along!"

"I'd rather not!"

"Don't be a spoilsport, please!"

"Oh, Ruby, leave me alone!"

"Indeed, I shan't. You've got to come. Quentin will call the whole thing off if you don't and I'll be furious with you."

...the midst of the discussion, Quentin himself, and a friend, arrived to back up Ruby's arguments.

Three against one! It wasn't fair. And Cynthia was so unhappy anyhow, that she dreaded being left alone to mope and brood.

"Oh, very well, I'll come," she said at last in a dispirited sort of way.

Less than an hour later they were at the dance club which was not a high-class specimen of its kind, but very crowded.

Quentin ordered supper. Queer dishes that Cynthia did not like, but ate, out of politeness to her host, although she wasn't hungry. The four sat at a little table on a balcony overlooking the dance floor below, where the principal performers were dark, foreign-looking young men with anemic faces and thin legs, and girls in low-cut frocks, with bold, painted faces and a sirenish appearance.

Much loud laughter might have been heard, but Cynthia had no time to believe that the keenest enjoyment was occurring, but Cynthia had an uncanny intuition of her own, and knew, subconsciously, that these folk were only "passing the time," and almost as weary as herself tonight.

At one end of the hall a negro orchestra—consisting of a pianist, a drummer, and a violinist, as well as a little chocolate-colored boy who played the saxophone—discouraged breezy music, while a fifth negro, gold teeth showing in his dusky face, sang lustily the melody of the moment through a megaphone.

Ruby and Quentin's friend danced several times together, while Cynthia and the artist watched.

"Tired, little girl?" the latter cooed in a beguiling tone.

She resented his familiar air, and answered in a monosyllable.

"Let me order you a little wine, will you?"

"No, thanks. I never touch it."

"Ah, that's foolish. You miss half the fun in life!"

"That's only one opinion. Others may think differently." She showed unexpected spirit.

"He tried another tack. 'Do you know I'm just crazy to paint you? There's something wonderful about you, dusky and elusive. And your eyes are like dark pools in a forest, where the faeries play.'"

She stared straight ahead of her, quite unimpressed.

"Would you give me a sitting some time?"

"I'm much too busy, thanks. My days are occupied, and Saturday too."

"Hoighy-toighy! Quite a little gad-about! But I'll be bound there are lots of boys only too ready to take you out and entertain you?"

"I was thinking of Aunt Ellen," replied Cynthia in a flat, conclusive tone that knocked the romance out of the occasion. "I like to take her out during the week-ends, so I must decline your kind offer."

Later on, it was suggested that they go on to another "club" of Quentin Gray's, which was even livelier than this one.

"It's nearly eleven, and I must go straight home," said Cynthia firmly. The heat and noise and glitter of this place had made her head ache almost as badly as her heart was aching over the happenings of the day.

And so they left. When they got out on the pavement, she looked so pale and tired that Quentin grabbed her arm as though to support her.

It was an unkind fate which willed that Murray Stewart, whose bachelor flat was in this neighborhood, should be returning from a desolate evening at a moving picture, and should pass that very dance club just as Cynthia emerged, with the "artist-chap" clinging to her arm as though he owned her, and never would let go again.

As for the girl, on seeing Murray, her heart leaped to her throat, then nearly stopped its beating. She gave a quick, formal little bow, which he returned, and then passed on, astounded at seeing the girl he had so admired—yes, and loved!—emerging from a haunt that might be classified as questionable, and in company with a noisy, loud-voiced crew. He had not recognized Ruby, but the red hair gleaming under the pert toque looked oddly artificial in this light—"dye," he thought—and Quentin's manfied was certainly a foreigner of some sort.

"So this is how she spends her evenings!" he thought, angry that she had so hoodwinked him. What was it she had said when she refused his invitation only a few hours ago? "I don't go out much. I want to be free for the morning. I don't like leaving my aunt alone."

Tomorrow—An Unpleasant Surprise

WILL CONCENTRATE ON VANCOUVER BRANCH

Mr. J. N. Harvey Declines to Withdraw From Local Clothing Firm—May Sell as Going Concern

Mr. J. N. Harvey, head of the clothing firm that bears his name, was in the city yesterday. The object of his visit was one that Victorians will regret, having for its purpose the withdrawal of Mr. Harvey from Victoria in order that he may concentrate all his efforts upon the Vancouver branch of the business, which he finds requires the fullest share of his attention.

It is not without regrets on the part of Mr. Harvey that he has decided upon this move, for, as he stated yesterday to a Colonist reporter, the outlook for business is good here and the Victoria branch has been a very satisfactory one. It is more than likely that while Mr. Harvey feels it necessary to withdraw from the local store, the business will in all likelihood be carried on under new owners, who may take over the stock as a going concern. Mr. Harvey spoke in the most flattering way of the local staff, which has conducted the business, with Mr. R. B. Price as manager.

In spite of the fact that he feels that it is advisable to concentrate on the one business, Mr. Harvey's faith in the tourist business as an adjunct to trade here in Victoria was of the most enthusiastic type. He feels that the fringes of this business only have been touched as yet, and he is a firm advocate of the closest co-operation in this line between Victoria and Vancouver.

A stock-reducing sale is to be initiated at once by Mr. Harvey's company.

"After very careful consideration our directors have reached the conclusion that the interests of our company will be best served by closing the Victoria business and concentrating in Vancouver," said Mr. J. N. Harvey.

"We regret exceedingly pulling out of Victoria just at the present time, but our experience in the new stand in Vancouver, where we have the whole building, has led us to the conclusion that by concentrating our efforts and resources there we can double our turnover and cut the overhead in two."

"I certainly have no reason to lose faith in Victoria," he has come safely through the readjustment period and the business is on a paying basis, and in addition July, which is usually an ordinary Summer business month, has through the tremendous increase in tourist trade been turned into a really profitable month, showing in Victoria an increase in excess of 40 per cent over last year."

"I believe that the tourist business of this Summer, great as it has been, is only a slight forerunner of what it means in the future. Business for the retailer during the Summer months, which is more or less uncertain and usually unprofitable, should in the near future rank with the Christmas month as regards volume. I have lived at the Coast for thirteen years, and during all this time I have never experienced zero in the Winter or $0 in the Summer. I know this continent well on both sides of the line, and I know of no place to compare with Victoria for beauty, especially during the early Summer. All we need is to make these things known. The business community of Vancouver recognized the importance of the tourist and recently subscribed $75,000, and the City Council is adding another $75,000 to be spent in publicity and attractions for the tourist. I believe these two Co-op. cities should co-operate in their publicity efforts with advantage to both."

"Regarding our business here, we have found that the people of this city demand good merchandise. We have always endeavored to meet them in this, and they have shown their appreciation by their loyalty to the store. The only reason we have for closing this store is to concentrate on a bigger effort in Vancouver. The store will be closed on Friday all day in preparation for a sale to open Saturday morning. After the stock has been reduced to the minimum, we will then remove the balance to Vancouver, or sell as a going concern."

Old-timers in Victoria will recall that this business was established by B. Williams & Company in 1881, was taken over by the Harvey Company (who were already established in

History of Association Football

By C. V. Milton

Our Most Ancient Game

There is no doubt that football is the oldest of our national games. It has been the sport of the "masses" for at least six hundred years, and it is very probable that it was a pastime indulged in by the old Roman legions, though there is nothing to prove that Britain owes this to Roman civilization as she does her good roads and possibly her horse-racing. The Roman "folle" was undoubtedly a large inflated ball, and though the game was handball there is no doubt that the feet were brought into play.

In olden times, when most of the lives of men consisted in working or fighting, the inactivity of winter was against the nature of our Saxon forefathers and what was more natural than to inflate a pig's bladder and punt about, struggle for possession, and eventually arrange sides and mark for goals? The great Shrove-Tuesday game played at Chester hundreds of years ago was started, we are told, in celebration of a victory won over Danish invaders, and the original ball was a Dane's head! To some critics perhaps this sounds very true for we are even today accused of using various parts of our opponent's anatomy in place of the regulation ball. At Derby also there was a Shrove-Tuesday game and that is claimed to be a custom initiated in the third century after a victory over the Romans. Unfortunately what is actually the first record of the game refers to it as the well-known game of ball; this occurs early in the twelfth century, but as we have many references to football in the succeeding centuries there is no doubt that the "well-known game of ball" was football. In the centuries to come, when antiquarians are studying our ways, they may come across this article, and for their information I hereby let it be known that the "well-known game of ball" of the twelfth century is the American game of baseball and is more usually called "ball-game."

Medieval Football

Football in the middle ages was certainly a ferocious and bloody game, although it was not considered necessary to get a dead man's head to play with, for we are told that it was windy ball or bladder encased in leather. The goals were bushes or well-known landmarks at any distance apart from a few yards to two or three miles; the sides were in numbers anything from dozens to hundreds, and the rules were—well, there were no rules except that if a player wished to retire hurt he was supposed to be allowed to do so without molestation—otherwise you traveled with the ball in any manner whatsoever and your opponent could rob you of it in any manner they pleased. The result was one grand and glorious "dog pile" raging up and down the countryside and even up and down the narrow streets of towns and cities. The London apprentices in particular being very fond of this method of spending Sunday. Death occasionally caused interference, but the chief objections to the game were that it broke the peace of the Sabbath and that it kept many young men away from the butts. Sunday being the great day for training in archery. Of course any pedestrian occupation was despised by the knights of chivalry, and was confined to the lower classes, but in spite of the fact that kings decreed against it, and the church decried it, the old game flourished, and it was as hopeless to try to kill it in England or Scotland then as it would be today. The first law against football was passed by Edward II in 1314, and this was re-enacted time after time by other monarchs throughout the middle ages, in fact the game has never been dead except perhaps for a few years during the Puritan regime.

The game was finally allowed to be played by Charles II, who actually attended a match played between his servants and the household of the Duke of Albemarle, and whereas up to that time football was legally a crime, we must suppose that decent people have been playing it now for about one hundred and forty years, though it would be a brave man who dare declare that the yeoman of the twelfth century was not a decent man.

The Ancestor of Our Modern Games

In these old games the rules differed greatly in various localities. The ball was a "windy" ball, but in some parts it could be carried in the hand and thrown about, others allowed it to be knocked with a club, and there is evidence from the writing of French visitors that in some of the town games no collaring or wrestling was allowed. These various games have developed into our modern hockey and cricket on one side and soccer and rugby on the other.

It is perhaps not surprising to learn that early in the nineteenth century, when Europe and Britain were either struggling against Napoleon or recovering from the struggle, the game of football, like many others, was waning in popularity and becoming a rarity. In fact it was not until the middle of this century that the revival came and then it came from the public schools of England, and it is entirely from these schools that our modern football has come.

The Birth of Rugby and Soccer

Taking into consideration the discipline imposed on boys at school, and the care taken of them by the authorities, it can easily be understood that where the playground was unsuitable the old rough game which we have been studying would be strictly forbidden, and the boys and masters of the several schools devised rules to suit their respective grounds. Hence, we find that at Rugby, where they had a spacious plot of grassy land to play on, they adopted the old rushing, collaring, carrying and tripping game of their forefathers, and it is to Rugby, and to Rugby alone, that we owe our modern game of rugby football. However, Charterhouse, Eton and Westminster had perforce to limit their football to kicking the ball about and tackling without throwing each other about too much, and it is from these latter schools among others that we have developed the modern dribbling game called association football.

The next difficulty was encountered when the boys who had left school and had tried to play with the Old Boys of other schools found that each school had learnt a game with its own set of rules. In 1863 many clubs having been formed to play the dribbling game, notably in Sheffield and around London, an attempt was made to organize the London clubs and to standardize the rules. The result was that hacking and tripping were to be allowed if the player was carrying the ball. Before the end of this conference, however, the boys of Eton, Harrow, Westminster and Charterhouse who were in attendance at Cambridge had met and drawn up a code of rules forbidding all tripping with the ball, the arms, together with hacking, tripping and collaring.

The two committees immediately met, and the Rugbyans of the London party withdrew, with the result that Cambridge and London started what was called the Football Association, and this has been our governing body ever since that date, celebrating its diamond jubilee this year, the rules being finally agreed to on December 8, 1863.

and there is evidence from the writing of French visitors that in some of the town games no collaring or wrestling was allowed. These various games have developed into our modern hockey and cricket on one side and soccer and rugby on the other.

It is perhaps not surprising to learn that early in the nineteenth century, when Europe and Britain were either struggling against Napoleon or recovering from the struggle, the game of football, like many others, was waning in popularity and becoming a rarity. In fact it was not until the middle of this century that the revival came and then it came from the public schools of England, and it is entirely from these schools that our modern football has come.

The Birth of Rugby and Soccer

Taking into consideration the discipline imposed on boys at school, and the care taken of them by the authorities, it can easily be understood that where the playground was unsuitable the old rough game which we have been studying would be strictly forbidden, and the boys and masters of the several schools devised rules to suit their respective grounds. Hence, we find that at Rugby, where they had a spacious plot of grassy land to play on, they adopted the old rushing, collaring, carrying and tripping game of their forefathers, and it is to Rugby, and to Rugby alone, that we owe our modern game of rugby football. However, Charterhouse, Eton and Westminster had perforce to limit their football to kicking the ball about and tackling without throwing each other about too much, and it is from these latter schools among others that we have developed the modern dribbling game called association football.

The next difficulty was encountered when the boys who had left school and had tried to play with the Old Boys of other schools found that each school had learnt a game with its own set of rules. In 1863 many clubs having been formed to play the dribbling game, notably in Sheffield and around London, an attempt was made to organize the London clubs and to standardize the rules. The result was that hacking and tripping were to be allowed if the player was carrying the ball. Before the end of this conference, however, the boys of Eton, Harrow, Westminster and Charterhouse who were in attendance at Cambridge had met and drawn up a code of rules forbidding all tripping with the ball, the arms, together with hacking, tripping and collaring.

The two committees immediately met, and the Rugbyans of the London party withdrew, with the result that Cambridge and London started what was called the Football Association, and this has been our governing body ever since that date, celebrating its diamond jubilee this year, the rules being finally agreed to on December 8, 1863.

The Growth of Soccer

Very shortly after the birth of the association several Sheffield clubs organized and formed another governing body, and for ten years the two bodies ran along side by side until the latter body threw in their lot with the more powerful association. The chief difference in the London and the Sheffield game had been in the offside rule, then as now the most difficult point to legislate upon. Sheffield had allowed only one opponent in front, whereas London, after four years with no offside rule at all because of the objection to it by Eton, in 1867 had adopted the present principle requiring three opponents to be between the player and the goal.

It was not until 1872 that the Scottish clubs could field a representative side, and in that year the first international game was played. This was followed a year later by the Oxford and Cambridge match, the former ending in a scoreless draw, while Oxford won the "Varsity" game, 2-0. Wales joined the international series in 1876 and Ireland in 1882. "The Cup" was first played for in 1871, and was first won by the Wanderers, who defeated Royal Engineers, 1-0. All this early association football was played by amateurs, most of whom were old boys of the above named soccer schools.

Rise of Professionalism

In 1871, the committee of the Association, feeling that the game required a little more nursing, and desirous of bringing some of the recognized clubs into the fold, decided to institute a challenge cup competition open to all affiliated clubs. This was "The Cup," and the reader knows how the competition has flourished from that time till now, and that the gate at a final reaches into the hundred thousand and over. The organization of cup competitions proved so effective that new clubs sprung up all over the country, large crowds were attracted, collections were made to defray expenses, and players were offered special inducements to stay in certain towns. For a long time veiled professionalism was the order of the day, especially in the great industrial centres of the North. Gradually these men were enabled to devote their whole winter time to training for and practicing football. They, by their skill, improved the game out of all knowledge, they adopted and bettered the passing game introduced by Cambridge, the league was formed in 1888 with the purpose of drawing out a regular schedule of fixtures for the professional clubs of Lancashire and other Northern counties, and while the schools and universities claim the honor of starting modern football, the pros, with their leagues and their wonderful organization, have done more to popularize the game in the British Isles than almost pure amateurs ever dreamed of doing.

The Ubiquity of Soccer

Though soccer is the British national game it is now by no means limited to the Old Country. France can hold her own with our best clubs; first-class teams are to be found in Denmark and Scandinavia; South Africa, Australia, New Zealand, India and South America know all about it, and the reader knows how important a game it is in Canada, more especially on Vancouver Island, which last season supplied the champion team of the Dominion Football League.

CAST-IRON SYSTEM OF ASIATIC MIND

British Labor Leader Cheered by Delegates at Portland Convention When He States Soviet

PORTLAND, Oct. 4.—Delegates in the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor came to their feet in a storm of applause today when the Russian Soviet Government was denounced as a "cast-iron system originated in an Asiatic mind, and contrary to the principles of democracy."

Frank Hodges, secretary of the Coal Mines Federation of Great Britain, was the speaker. He also made the definite prediction that American labor would enter politics. This declaration, however, evoked no applause.

Speaking of those who favor Bolshevism, he declared: "They say liberty is a figment of the imagination. They declare that what is needed is the Soviet form of government."

"We invite them to tell us on our platform what they have to say in defense of their theory. But when they have given their argument it is very apparent that they have nothing to offer that is superior to the democratic form."

"We do not tolerate dictators of any kind. We revolt against having ideas imposed upon us from a higher authority. What we must beware of are the forces that work in the dark, that bore from within. In your trade union movement you must guard against the individual, who, by cunning and by methods that do not stand the light of day, works to destroy your movement."

"We do not want a cast-iron system originated by an Asiatic mind that is contrary to democracy."

In his remarks on politics, Mr. Hodges said:

"I know that you hold definite views in regard to labor's participation in politics. So did labor in Great Britain fifty years ago. It is inevitable that when the labor movement has achieved what it seeks in the matter of wages and hours, that it will cry out for control of matters affecting life."

WATERWORKS STAFF OF SAANICH REDUCED

Acting in the belief that a staff of five employees of the Saanich waterworks was too large for the small proportion to the work and duties involved, a motion passed the Saanich Council last night to reduce the number of employees to four. The discussion occurred on the question, and it was suggested that the staff be reduced to three in order to determine actual requirements. If the reduced staff failed to produce efficiency, then it would be increased or other action taken. Another suggestion made was that the department be operated more on a contract basis, the municipal office at Royal Oak. Adjustments of the staff will be made by the Town and Road Superintendent.

gave him an excellent opportunity for outlining in a preliminary way his agricultural programme, and yesterday he announced that this programme might be summarized under the following heads:

1. Practical encouragement of farming by means of Government loans to farmers on easy terms.
2. Establishment of a system of community creameries so as to reduce expenditure of long rail hauls for perishable dairy produce to market and enable farmers to make a monthly income instead of one solely dependent on annual harvest.
3. Thorough investigation into conditions leading to the wide spread between the price paid to the producer and by the consumer for beef in British Columbia.

Exodus From Farms

"Everyone has now been convinced that British Columbia soil and climate will produce grain, fodder crops and other good crops to the best," said Mr. Bowser. "But the events of the past few years have shown that the problem of production is as nothing compared with the problem of marketing. This season the farmers of the Interior are producing wonderful crops, but they cannot market them. This condition has brought about a serious crisis in the agricultural industry, which, unless soon remedied, will result in a wholesale desertion of settlers from some of the Province's best farm lands. This exodus has already made itself felt and it is more than keeping pace with the weak and ineffective efforts of the Oliver Government to bring in new settlers. The settlers are wedged in between conditions today that simply force poverty upon them, and to deprive such an important element of the Province's population from prosperity for an indefinite time is merely to court economic disaster for the whole Province."

"These farmers, who are crying out for aid and are being continually ignored, have plenty of good land and plenty of ambition, enterprise and skill. All they lack is money. day, especially in the great industrial centres of the North. Gradually these men were enabled to devote their whole winter time to training for and practicing football. They, by their skill, improved the game out of all knowledge, they adopted and bettered the passing game introduced by Cambridge, the league was formed in 1888 with the purpose of drawing out a regular schedule of fixtures for the professional clubs of Lancashire and other Northern counties, and while the schools and universities claim the honor of starting modern football, the pros, with their leagues and one who has studied their grievance can be surprised at that. They feel as though they had been abandoned. One cannot help wondering how these farmers would be making out today had the Conservative cheap money policy of 1914, under which settlers could get twenty or thirty-year loans at 6 1/2 per cent, not been scrapped by the Liberal Government and replaced by a programme of building million-dollar irrigation ditches and bonusing hopeless industries.

"Under present conditions the beef cattleman are facing a dark future. Beef prices have dropped to three cents a pound, and yet the retail price of beef has not been noticeably reduced for years. No wonder the cattleman are disheartened. They complain of being exploited by the big packing interests, which seem to work in combination with each other in buying beef. This condition makes it necessary for stockmen to sell steers that should be worth $40 for $17. There is a vast field there for investigation.

"We covered a huge area on this trip and everywhere we went there was unmistakable evidence that the people are absolutely through with Oliver," said Mr. Bowser. "The people are in a serious frame of mind and are more interested than ever in the sincere efforts put forward by anyone to improve their lot. That is why we no longer feel called upon to criticize the Oliver Government at our public meetings. The people are convinced of the Government's faults. What they want to know is what we propose to do when we get into power."

Tricked by Promises

"The people realize now that they have been tricked and fooled by the specious promises offered them by Oliver and his supporters, and they are counting the days before they will have a chance to overthrow the Liberal Government. Men who were loyal to Oliver a few years ago, who headed Liberal organizations in their respective communities, are today more hostile towards the Government than are lifelong Tories. If there was not such a tremendously sound reason for it all, the situation would be remarkably phenomenal."

Mr. Bowser was accompanied on his trip by Mr. R. H. Pooley, M.P.P. for Esquimalt, who returned on Wednesday afternoon. "The route was from Prince Rupert to Prince George and Jasper Park, and then south by Kamloops and Salmon Arm, winding up at Agassiz. Eighteen meetings were held altogether, and Mr. Bowser was called upon to officiate at a number of functions, such as fairs and local celebrations. All the meetings were large and sympathetic and not a single disturbing element was encountered throughout the journey."

THOUSAND LAUGHS

"The Call of the Woods." Playing Tonight at Pantages, Offers Much Amusement

"The Call of the Woods." Macy & Baird's offering for tonight and tomorrow afternoon and night. It is one of the most interesting of stories. It deals with a mother who has two sons, one an honest, lovable character and the other a thorough hypocrite and thief, although he manages to avoid the consequences of his misdeeds and thence the reliance upon his innocent brother, even turning the mother's heart against him.

How the truth is finally brought to light and the wronging boy vindicated, even though accused of murder, furnishes material for a very interesting drama.

Mr. Macy plays the part of the wronged son, a very likeable character. Mr. Nordeth gives a finished performance as the hypocritical brother. Miss Zoe Bates has a wonderful opportunity as the mother. Miss Jean Stone is very sweet and lovable as the sweetheart, and Miss Bronson, as the half-bred trapper's daughter, is very instrumental in bringing the real thief to light.

"Toby," the featured comedian, has one of his best comedy parts, and Mr. F. A. Dale, as Toby's father, materially assists him in producing the thousand laughs promised in each production.

enthusiastic reception by the large audience present, and this masterpiece by Jerome K. Jerome, made famous by the well-known actor,

Sir Forbes Robertson, bids fair to be one of the most successful offerings which Mr. Compton has given the public. As the "Stranger," Mr.

Compton very forcibly brings out all the human pathos which the author has so cleverly conceived, and his presentation of the character demonstrates the wonderful versatility possessed by him. Miss Dorree Stuart, as Vivian, is adding to her already long list of admirers, while Mr.

that quarrelsome couple. Miss Agnes them being a free-for-all fight staged on one of the studio stages and is remembered at the plant as one of the fiercest tussles ever en-

"The Passing of the Third Floor

and is a production which merits exceptionally clever acting, given in a most accomplished manner by the Compton Comedy Players.

The play, which has won for itself

a unique position in theatrical productions, is out of the ordinary line of plays. The plot is unlike those of the popular farce, comedy or drama, but nevertheless it has a charm of its own which is compelling in its interest, and the lines of the Stranger, spoken by Mr. Francis Compton, contain much philosophy and practical wisdom. As the Stranger, the Third Floor Back of a Bloomsbury boarding house, Mr. Compton again manifests his talent as a character actor. With his quiet dignity he enters the house where strife has hitherto been carried on in the little circle of life, and by his personality and his appeal to the better nature of the boarders he turns the inmates into a friendly group of human beings. His part has a mystical element, which permeates the play.

Last night the audience at the Playhouse was most enthusiastic and sincere in their applause, and Miss

Agnes Burton, who appears as the

Landlady, and Miss Kathleen Mc-

Donagh, as Mrs. Tompkins, each received lovely bouquets of flowers.

Miss Dorree Stuart is charming as the young daughter of Major and Mrs.

Tompkins, who are a rather quarrelsome pair before the advent of the Stranger. Mr. Herbert Leslie takes the part of the Major. Miss Peggy

Lewis has made a fine debut in the Playhouse, and her vivacious interpretation of the role of Stasia, a slavey, is most pleasing.

Miss Belle Gilmer and Miss Ursula

McFarlane appear respectively as two of the boarders, while the cast is completed with Mr. G. Gibson-Gunn as

Joey Wright, a retired bookmaker;

Clifford Winter; Mr.

Will Marshall, a city man; and Mr.

George M. Durham as Harry Lark-

com. The actors have evidently been selected with care, and are excellent in their respective roles, making

"The Passing of the Third Floor

Back," one of the most interesting plays as yet produced by the company.

France in the Ruhr

A FRENCHMAN'S VIEW

By A. Duval

(Translated for The Colonist by Courtesy of the Committee of the Franco-Canada Society.)

The attention of the whole world is at present centered on the French occupation of the Ruhr, and not a day passes without a speech or an opinion expressing a censure of France's attitude.

From Great Britain such censure comes rather late; she should have criticized or expressed her fears on this subject earlier during the many months of the occupation. Before taking action France requested her ally, England, to co-operate with her in the occupation, and on the refusal of the latter France and Belgium took the entire responsibility, with no idea of conquest, but solely to obtain payment of the reparations promised by Germany. In fact, it is simply a pledge which France will not surrender until her full debt is paid.

Wherein does the illegality lie? It is the usual action taken by every creditor against his debtor.

France has always acted loyally, she has always respected European law and, for her treaties are never "scraped of paper," to quote Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg.

Defence of French Policy

In similar circumstances any far-seeing power would have acted in the same way. Great Britain joined France in the war because she is an intelligent, far-seeing, and business-like nation, anxious in all cases to safeguard her interests, and she immediately saw in what danger she would be if France were beaten from a Germany with power considerably increased by the spoils of victory.

When Germany sued for peace the occupation of the Ruhr and the faulty Versailles treaty could easily have been avoided, since at that time the present divergent views of the two powers did not exist.

Unfortunately at that time the English and French Governments showed too much indulgence to Germany in stopping the war at the moment when victory was carrying the two nations to the gates of Berlin and Sofia.

The commanders-in-chief were in consternation at seeing the fruits of their efforts annihilated. The war had lasted over four years; they asked for fifteen days to assure more complete victory.

From an economic point of view France's losses were as great as those of Great Britain, plus the entire destruction of her northern provinces and 1,400,000 dead, for which she has so far received no compensation.

The latest news looks favorable. Germany is seeking to negotiate for the evacuation of the Ruhr.

The Mind of Germany

Does she mean to pay, or to propose further guarantees? If she has the will to pay she has the ability, and it is probable that her new offers will be real and sincere, since she has at present a government which appears to be strong, resolved to settle the question and which has certainly found a ready support, rendering a solution possible.

But whatever may be the value of the German proposals or guarantees the Ruhr will remain occupied, totally or in part, until payment has been made in full.

It would be a grave mistake to imagine or believe that the problem of the Ruhr has changed the political views of Great Britain and France or caused their mutual friendship to suffer.

Not. These two great nations have the power, England on the sea, France in the air, and they must remain united and friends and allies in order to insure the peace of Europe, for, sooner or later, Germany may again be on her feet and anxious for war; militarism may again predominate, arm Russia and attempt to upset peace.

Will she have time, or shall we one day, sooner than we think, see the United States of Europe? Politics are full of surprises!

CLOTHES DO MAKE THE MAN

"As in everything else, the Englishman accommodates himself to what is required of him; but he never dresses up, like a foreigner, for the fun of the thing," writes Stephen McKenna in The Fortnightly Review. "And, though a man—under the influence of the first liqueur brandy in Great Britain—may have taken a mischievous delight in getting their characters into tight places and leaving their extrication to the other authors. One of them, indeed, killed off all the characters in the story, and then passed the manuscript on to the next author for completion. That gentleman escaped from his predicament by informing his readers that he had not had time to read the chapter and begging them to excuse any incoherence that might appear in the narrative. He thereupon went calmly on with the defunct characters."

The collaborators on this latest experiment are Pierre Benoit, Paul Bourget, Henri Duvernois, and Madame d'Houville—The Living Age.

AUTHOR OF GREAT EPIC

The national epic of Portugal is the "Lusiad," written by Luis Vaz de Camoens (1524-1580), and published in 1572. The great poem, which has been translated into many languages, was begun by Camoens while he was in exile in India, and was completed shortly after he was allowed to return to Portugal. Before 1760, thirty-eight editions of the "Lusiad" were printed in Lisbon.

Although the "Lusiad" was, as a piece of literature, a tremendous success, it netted its author little financial gain, for, as his epitaph destroyed in 1755, read: "He lived poor and neglected, and so died."

Action of Bacteria on Cellulose

Though the action of bacteria on cellulose is hardly a problem for the engineer, the effects of such action have more than an academic interest for him. The engineer still asks the chemist to wait to tell him what coal really is, but it is at any rate generally admitted that coal is largely formed by the action of bacteria on vegetable matter, in which the cellulose is broken down. When the chemist utilizes this means in order to produce power alcohol and power gas from vegetable waste, or when cellulose (paper waste, etc.), has to be destroyed by bacteria in sewage, the engineer is again interested, as paratus in which such reactions are to be carried on. It was understood bacterial action on cellulose, however, which was the subject recently naked as they shall go out, equal at last before their Creator and the universe; with no false dignity and less than no false modesty; differing one from another only in adipose deposit and watching that last difference disappearing under the merciless hands of the rubber.

"After the cold plunge they were dressed in similar towels and laid to sleep like foundling children. Waking, they called for coffee or vermouth, but their messes held little enough of the quarter-deck or the cabin-room. Uniformity deadened their souls and dimmed their courage; not until they had padded in their socks to the entrance-hall did they recover a personality. There is more than a rhetorical symbolism in the Jackboots of superiors. Quivering in the recoil from their own salutes, the subaltern and the midshipman would then surrender their faces; the admiral and the field marshal would yie in offering them to the cabinet minister; and, had a Napoleon of the press been bathing, it is likely that he would have been driven away while the others walked."

Early Students of Weather Lore

Charles Fitzhugh Talmage in The Outlook

Concerted efforts to solve the mysteries of the weather run back to the year 1644, when a corps of meteorological observers was organized under the auspices of Grand Duke Ferdinand II, of Tuscany.

One of the most interesting facts about this pioneer enterprise is that the participants (mostly Jesuit priests), who kept up weather observations on a more or less uniform plan for thirteen years, were not confined to Tuscany, nor even to Italy. In other words, the earliest co-operative undertaking in weather observations gave due recognition to the fact that the atmosphere knows no political boundaries.

During the eighteenth century there were at least four similar experiments in international meteorology. The most important was that carried out by the Meteorological Society of the Palatinate, founded at Mannheim, Germany, in 1780. This society secured the services of capable observers widely distributed over the world; viz., fourteen in Germany, two in Austria-Hungary, two in Switzerland, four in Italy, three in France, four in Belgium and Holland, three in Russia, four in Scandinavia, one in Greenland and two in North America (at Bradford and Cambridge, Mass.).

Unsuccessful efforts were made to obtain observations from Java, Labrador and Iceland. Instructions were drawn up in Latin for the guidance of the observers, who were all supplied with instruments of uniform pattern. Lastly, the records of this far-flung system of weather stations down to the year 1792 were published in twelve quarto volumes, copies of which are now among the rare treasures of meteorological libraries.

These records made possible the construction of the earliest weather maps, though they were not contemporary with the work of the society. About 1820 the German physicist H. W. Brandes, using data from the Mannheim reports and a few other sources, was able to chart the weather over Europe, day by day, for the whole of the year 1783. Meteorologists deplore the fact that these interesting charts are no longer extant.

A NOVEL BY FOUR AUTHORS

Four widely known French writers have collaborated in a new novel, "Le Roman des quatre," which has just appeared in Paris. The novel follows the model established by "Le Comte de Berny," which appeared many years ago. The collaborators have written turn by turn, and the novel becomes a series of letters by different hands.

The most distinguished of the authors of "Le Comte de Berny" was Theophile Gautier, who was assisted by Madame Emile de Girardin, Jules Sandeau and Joseph Méry, each writer being responsible for one character.

The new novel has been written in a more frivolous spirit. The plot of "Le Roman des quatre" was prearranged, but the authors of the latest novel delight in getting their characters into tight places and leaving their extrication to the other authors. One of them, indeed, killed off all the characters in the story, and then passed the manuscript on to the next author for completion. That gentleman escaped from his predicament by informing his readers that he had not had time to read the chapter and begging them to excuse any incoherence that might appear in the narrative. He thereupon went calmly on with the defunct characters."

The collaborators on this latest experiment are Pierre Benoit, Paul Bourget, Henri Duvernois, and Madame d'Houville—The Living Age.

AUTHOR OF GREAT EPIC

The national epic of Portugal is the "Lusiad," written by Luis Vaz de Camoens (1524-1580), and published in 1572. The great poem, which has been translated into many languages, was begun by Camoens while he was in exile in India, and was completed shortly after he was allowed to return to Portugal. Before 1760, thirty-eight editions of the "Lusiad" were printed in Lisbon.

Although the "Lusiad" was, as a piece of literature, a tremendous success, it netted its author little financial gain, for, as his epitaph destroyed in 1755, read: "He lived poor and neglected, and so died."

Action of Bacteria on Cellulose

Though the action of bacteria on cellulose is hardly a problem for the engineer, the effects of such action have more than an academic interest for him. The engineer still asks the chemist to wait to tell him what coal really is, but it is at any rate generally admitted that coal is largely formed by the action of bacteria on vegetable matter, in which the cellulose is broken down. When the chemist utilizes this means in order to produce power alcohol and power gas from vegetable waste, or when cellulose (paper waste, etc.), has to be destroyed by bacteria in sewage, the engineer is again interested, as paratus in which such reactions are to be carried on. It was understood bacterial action on cellulose, however, which was the subject recently of a discussion by the Society of Chemical Industry. In 1908, Sir Frederic Nathan, who opened the discussion, found that three cordite explosions which had occurred in India in that year were connected with a distillation of gun-cotton. In 1917 supplies of cotton waste and cotton linters were found to have undergone similar distillation in this country, and further investigation indicated that all celluloses are liable to attack by bacteria, and moulds, aerobic as well as anaerobic, especially in warm and damp climates, and that their corrodibility varies with the kind of cotton and with its origin. The greater or lesser resistance of different cottons to bacteria attack is a matter of great importance, not only to the planter and the textile manufacturer. Though the difference may mainly be due to the amounts of non-cellulose constituents present, it is generally believed that the cellulose in cotton fibres and the woody ligno-cellulose are more resistant than the pectocellulose of fruit and the hemicelluloses of pith, seaweed and mangrove-wurzel. In the rotting of flax the action is to stop before the fibre is attacked; when straw and similar materials are to be converted into manure, or when maize waste, grasses and also straw are to yield alcohol by fermentation the action is to go further. At Nobel's factory in Arrshire cotton waste is broken down completely to methanol and carbon dioxide, the methane being wanted for experimental purposes. Power gas has been obtained from vegetable waste. The Canadian attempts to convert sawdust and wood waste into alcohol and acetone by acid treatment and fermentation remain in the experimental stage. Probably success will come day be achieved, though at present the biochemical problems are still obscure in spite of the manifold researches carried out in this country by A. H. Lynn and H. Langwell, Dr. M. B. Hutchins, Dr. F. C. Thayer and others.—Engineering.

EAST SOOKE LOOKS TO IMPROVED HOGS

Farmers' Institute Holds Very Enthusiastic Meeting Addressed By Dominion Government Official

EAST SOOKE, Oct. 4.—The most enthusiastic meeting of the East Sooke Farmers' Institute as yet held took place on Tuesday last at Hazel. Seventeen members (including Mr. C. Pike, who joined at the close of the meeting) attended, also Mr. E. Whitney-Griffiths, who, in addition to kindly bringing out Mr. A. Morton, of the Federal Government staff, also had Mrs. and Mrs. Smart, of Metichon, with him.

Mr. Morton gave a very inspiring talk on "Hogs and Sheep," and suggested that a pedigree of hogs should be applied for from the Government stock pen. The application was handed to him a few minutes later, as East Sooke believes in getting to work straight away and loses no time.

Some discussion followed, and finally Mr. A. Gillespie undertook to be the board's guardian, and on a show of hands a Berkshire found most favor, only one voting for a York-shire.

Mr. Whitney-Griffiths spoke on the work of the advisory board, and urged members to make more use of it. He expressed a hope that other members, besides the delegates, would attend the next meeting of the board.

The secretary read a congratulatory letter received from Dr. War-nock, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, on the success of the Fall fair recently held.

The balance sheet of the fair was read, showing a total of $30.89 in hand, and a case of White Swan soap kindly donated by Pendergast & Sons for the fair funds has yet to be disposed of and should bring in another $10.

This sum will be "banked" until it is needed.

The idea of building a village hall was mooted and found favor.

The president, Mr. Donaldson, suggested that some of the hedges be given to the secretary as a return for all her hard work connected with the fair. She, however, expressed her gratitude for the kindly thought, but refused it, as her earnest desire is to see a hall built ere long.

A letter from the Chamber of Commerce was read respecting the Potato Fair to be held in the city from November 12 to 17. It was proposed that East Sooke should enter, and the idea was approved.

The Rev. R. Walker proposed a vote of thanks to the speakers, which was seconded by Mr. J. Oldershaw.

After the usual refreshments, Mr. Morton delighted the company with a musical entertainment, skills on Harry Leuder being much applauded, and brought a very successful evening to a close at 11 o'clock.

DUNCAN WAS SCENE OF CHARMING WEDDING

Popular Young Couple Married at St.
John's Church—Honeymoon
Trip to Eastern Points

DUNCAN, Oct. 4.—A wedding of much interest and charming in every detail was solemnized at St. John's Church yesterday noon, when Miss Lytle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Campbell, became the bride of Mr. John Charles McLennan, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John McLennan of Victoria.

The Rev. F. G. Christmas officiating. The church had been artistically decorated with autumn flowers and foliage, and made a pretty setting for the ceremony. The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, by whom she was given in marriage, looking pretty in a wedding dress of white silk crepe, with a high collar and simple lines, with soft drape from skirt, silver lace sleeves, and wearing the traditional wedding veil fastened in cap shape around the head with pearls and orange blossoms, and carrying a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Mary Campbell, who wore an exceptionally becoming costume of pale mauve crepe de Chine, with picture hat of the same tone, with touches of silver on hat and costume, and carried a bouquet of pink rosebuds and blue flowers. The groom was supported by Mr. Russell Pollock, of Victoria.

The groom's gift to the bride was a set of furs, to the bridemaid a string of pearls, and to the best man a silver ring, while the bride's gift to the groom was a leather suitcase.

Following the ceremony relatives and immediate friends repaired to the home of the bride's parents, where a reception was tendered, after which Mr. and Mrs. John McLennan left by motor for Victoria, en route for Eastern Ontario, where the honeymoon will be spent. They plan to be absent for about a month, and on their return will take up their residence in Duncan, Mr. McLennan being a fireman on the E. & N. Railway here.

Both the principals are very popular, and a large number were present at the service in the church, and the many lovely presents testified to the high esteem in which they are held. Miss Campbell until recently has been chief operator in the office of the B.C. Telephone Company here.

The out-of-town guests at the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. John McLennan, of Victoria, parents of the groom; Mr. R. Pollock, all of Victoria; Mr. and Mrs. A. Munro, of Vancouver.

BRIDE-TO-BE HONORED

NANAIMO, Oct. 4.—Miss Emma Wilson was the hostess Tuesday evening at a linen shower at her home in honor of Miss Nellie Dixon, whose marriage takes place next month. The bride-to-be was presented with a number of beautiful gifts by her many friends. The rooms were prettily decorated in purple, yellow and white streamers, with asters and dahlias in corresponding shades. A most happy social evening followed the presentation, during which delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Jerome Wilson.

HARVEST CARNIVAL STAGED BY I.O.D.E.

Nanaimo Basilar Chapter Carries Out
Benevolent Scheme With Much Elan

NANAIMO, Oct. 4.—One of the most successful social events staged here this season was a harvest carnival held in St. John Ambulance hall last evening, under the auspices of Basilar Chapter, I.O.D.E., in aid of the local library, besides lending financial assistance to the orphans of fallen heroes and the children of men maimed in the late war.

The hall, which was crowded to capacity, presented a gala appearance with its profusion of decorations. A portion of the floor was reserved for the cabaret with tables on either side and the centre was used for dancing and also utilized by the performers. There was a splendid novelty programme, and between each number a crowd took possession of the floor and gaily glided about to popular tunes rendered by the G.W.V.A. orchestra. At half time, a committee of the chapter served refreshments, after which the remaining portion of the programme was gone through.

The opening number was a shepherd's dance by the Misses Dorothy Dugg and Helen Grant. The children danced in perfect time, finishing with a number of hand springs that raised a clamor for a repetition, which was granted.

Mrs. Charles Wilson, of Victoria, who completely captivated the assembly with her pleasing personality, sweet contralto voice and clever acting, first appeared in an Oriental love song, "Olong Li," elaborately gowned. Again she appeared in an entirely different role, in a Gainsborough costume, which was without doubt her best number. She made a perfect picture in powdered wig, plumed hat and old-fashioned skirt, and her interpretation of an "Old-Fashioned Garden" was very fine.

The Old and the New

Bursts of applause demanded her return, when she introduced a witty parody, depicting an old-fashioned cottage transformed into a modern still. One amused admirer became over-enthusiastic, and before her number was finished he found himself handing Mrs. Wilson baskets full of flowers which had been placed on the guest table, much to the amusement of all present. Mrs. Wilson also gave a delightful rendition of "Pale Moon," appearing in a magnificent costume a la Blackfoot tribe.

Mr. J. Bricknell and a number of ladies from Duncan, danced and sang in true cabaret style, "You're Getting Younger Every Day." Mr. Duncan McLean and Miss Beveridge, also of Duncan, gave an attractive number, "A Glimpse of India," in interpreting which they used a fruit vendor's wagon and a real monkey. For an encore, the house demanded "Yes, We Have No Bananas," and the couple obliged in a pleasing fashion. Another feature by the Duncan artists was a romantic moon song, sung and acted by Mrs. Wade, Mrs. W. E. Corfield, Mrs. H. Swan, Mrs. Alexander, Miss Payne and Miss Stevens. The ladies also gave a snappy dance, at the conclusion of which their audience demanded an encore.

A Magnificent Songstress

Nanaimo's talent was brought to the front when Mrs. W. F. Drysdale sang "The Song of Mr. Soul," which she rendered in a very delightful manner. Signorina Italia Magliocco, a recent arrival from Italy, who sings in her native tongue, fearlessly rendered Caruso's "O Sole Mio" and similar selections, to the delight of all present.

There were many prominent persons present, including Senator Pianta, who, in declaring the carnival open, called attention to the record of the I.O.D.E., and the splendid effort made on the part of the Countess d'Audiffret, who had provided the venture in order that a portion of the receipts might be sent to France to aid the orphans and children of maimed and fallen soldiers. Mr. C. H. Dickie, M.P., was also among the guests, and occupied one of the thirty-two tables at the cabaret. Mr. George Dyke, of Victoria, was one of the many visitors from outside points.

The whole programme was well arranged and timed, and was conveyed by Miss Ursula Dobson, and proved to be one of the most delightful social events seen here in a long time.

Hansen Has Thrown His Crutches Away!

"Tanlac is the only thing I can give any credit for helping me," is the precise statement made recently by C. B. Hansen, a well-known carpenter, 1243 1/2 St. Street, West Edmonton, Alberta.

"For three years I had rheumatism so bad in my right hip and foot that I couldn't hit a lick of work. In fact, I couldn't get around at all without my cane or crutches. My pain was almost unbearable. I couldn't sleep and got down to a mere shadow of my old self."

"My case was so stubborn that it took a long, hard pull, but Tanlac finally brought me around in fine shape. It gave me a fine appetite and such complete relief from the rheumatism that I put my crutches aside and went back to work. It increased my weight twenty-five pounds and left me feeling like a new man."

UNEMPLOYMENT IS PROBLEM FOR DAIL

Relief Measures in Irish Free State Are Hinted at in Governor-General Healey's Speech

DUBLIN, Oct. 4.—Governor-General Healey's address before the joint session of the Irish Free State parliament yesterday embodied the large legislative programme already announced by the minister. No reference was made to the Ulster boundary question, but early in the speech the Governor-General emphasized that he was acting with King George.

Definite announcement was made of the government's intention to redeem the bonds issued in America and Ireland in support of the Republican movement which led to the establishment of the Free State, and it was implied that the Governor-General would assent to that course. Hope was expressed for the ultimate release of the majority of the Republican prisoners, and this was interpreted as indicating that the leaders would still be held, the rank and file being released.

On the unemployment question, now the most urgent of the Irish problems, the address indicated no definite policy, but hope was held out for submission of the proposals to the Dail for construction work of a relief nature.

The gravity of the situation was indicated by an announcement from President Cosgrave that the Dail would adjourn for a week to enable the ministers to attend the conference on the labor situation now being held in Dublin.

DOMINIONS ASK FOR PUBLICITY

urged that the fullest information on the proceedings be made available to the public.

At a subsequent meeting he raised the point again, strongly urging that the conference be purely a consultative one of the governments and not in any sense an imperial cabinet. In this view, following a discussion, the conference concurred and J. C. Campbell-Davidson, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, was appointed to attend the conference for the purpose of informing the press.

Then came a curious sequel. It was understood by the Dominion delegates that Mr. Davidson personally would meet the press in a system of view to answering questions. But instead of this course being followed the information was communicated to a colonial office official who in turn met the press.

This morning Hon. George P. Graham, of Canada, brought the matter before the Economic Conference, declaring that such a system did not work and might lead to difficulties. Tonight it was Mr. Davidson himself who received the press.

Committees

Canada has two representatives on the general secretariat of the conference, namely, Prof. Skelton, of Queen's University, on the Imperial, and Col. Reed Hyde, of Montreal, on Economic. Committees have been formed in connection with both conferences. Premier King will represent Canada on the main conference committee, dealing with treaty and territorial matters, and Sir Lomer Gouin in on the economic and trade matters. Another committee is being formed on Anglo-French interests in the New Hebrides, but Canada is not nominating a representative on this committee on the ground that she is not concerned in the question, it affecting Australia and New Zealand more particularly. Committees of the Economic Conference are also being appointed. R. H. Coats, Dominion statistician, will be the Canadian representative on the committee of statistics.

Harrison Watson, Trade Commissioner in London, it is expected, will be appointed to the committee on customs and valuations. A further committee on patents and trademarks is under way but a Canadian representative has not yet been selected.

Settlement

It is expected that the settlement will be the first important subject before the conference, although it is not likely to be reached today. British representatives, it is understood, have expressed a desire that this subject should be taken up first among the important matters. Despite heavy appropriations the overseas settlement scheme has not met with the success which had been hoped for while the unemployment problem has been growing, not only in Great Britain but also over the whole of Ireland. During the new settlement scheme, however, it is obvious, will not be a simple matter.

Advices received today indicate that New South Wales is deferring her part in the immigration agreement owing to the refusal of the land holders in that Australian state to sub-divide their land for settlement purposes.

Premier Smuts has plainly indicated that South Africa wants only immigrants of the skilled artisan type, as in the native population that country is already well supplied with unskilled labor.

The extent to which the Empire settlement scheme has been utilized is shown in the fact that only about 25,000 settlers under its provisions are leaving Great Britain annually. To date this year, they total 28,900. Of these 2,050 have gone to Canada under agreements between the Dominion and the British Government which were concluded last April. These Canadian settlers were divided into the following classes: Nominally 1,000 for settlers on land, 314; household workers, 894; children, 847.

Indian Problem

The main conference has decided to devote a day especially to a discussion of the position of the East Indians within the Empire and this has aroused considerable notice. The Indian delegates to the conference, it is understood, have been particularly pressing in their views that the question is an urgent one and that the status of the Indians in the Dominions and Colonies should be definitely defined. In this connection the problem of the status of the Indians in Kenya Colony is principally in view, but the discussion will include the position of the Hindus in British Columbia as much as the position of those in British East Africa.

Curiously enough, while the Indians' claims are being so urgently pressed, it is an Indian delegate to the conference who probably is arousing the keenest public interest at the present time, the Maharajah of Alwar. After sitting in the main conference, the Maharajah, dressed in gorgeous robes, is bowed by obsequious native Indian servants into the drab precincts of No. 19 Downing Street.

"And that we also express our sense of the personal loss we, as directors and members of the Chamber of Commerce, have sustained in the withdrawal from among us of a highly esteemed colleague, presiding officer and friend whose rare qualities of heart and mind endeared him to all of us, and whose association with us always will be a treasured recollection and an inspiration for good."

"And that a copy of this resolution be sent to Mrs. Cross and family with an expression of our heartfelt sympathy with them in their great sorrow."

The following telegrams of regret were received by the Chamber of Commerce and forwarded to the family of Mr. Cross:

From Mr. John W. Coburn, president of the Associated Boards of Trade of Vancouver Island:

"Please convey to your members and the family of the late lamented C. T. Cross, president of your Chamber, the sympathy of the Island Associated Board of Trade in this sudden and tragic bereavement which has come with such great shock. We sincerely feel we can ill afford to lose such a splendid executive and magnanimous friend."

From Mr. Harry Beckwith, president of the Portland Realty Board:

"The Portland Realty Board has just learned of the fatal accident to our dear friend, Charles T. Cross. We sorrow with you in your sad loss. Charlie had a host of friends in the United States, and he will be missed from our council. Please convey our sympathy to his family."

From President E. W. Beatty, of the Canadian Pacific Railway:

"Please convey to Mrs. Cross and the members of the family the deepest sympathy of myself and the directors of the company on the death of her husband."

BRIGHT FUTURE FOR ZIONIST MOVEMENT

Sir Alfred Mond Urges Full Allegiance Between Jews and Britain in Palestine

TORONTO, Oct. 4.—Sir Alfred Mond made a striking appeal here last night on behalf of the Zionist movement in an address to the members of the Zionist organizations.

Sir Alfred said that when he visited Palestine he found there a new generation of Jews growing up strong, clear-eyed and virile. He appealed for support of the Zionist movement.

"Now that Palestine is under British protection, free from the blighting hand of the Turk, Jewish nationalism had ceased to be a dream and the development of Palestine has become an excellent business proposition," he said. He advocated no divided allegiance between Jews and Britain, and to Great Britain are not opposed, he declared.

FIRST APPEARANCE

Victoria Fire Department Band Will Play at the Jubilee Hospital on Sunday Next

The Victoria Fire Department band which has been making steady progress for some months is to make its first public appearance on Sunday afternoon at the Jubilee Hospital when a concert will be given for the tubercular patients, commencing at 4 o'clock. This musical organization is composed of members of the department who have practised steadily in their spare time, and have, it is said, become quite proficient.

On the last of this month the firemen will give a dance in the Armory in aid of the band fund. The purpose of the dance is to raise funds for additional instruments and for the other expenses necessary in connection with such an organization. The public is therefore asked to assist.

British Mine Owners Refuse Higher Wages

LONDON, Oct. 4.—The coal mine owners remain adamant, refusing the miners' demands for higher wages. It is admitted that the miners on the average are getting very poor pay owing to the state of industry at present, but the owners contend that the profits do not allow an advance of wages.

The owners declare that in some areas of late there has been no profit whatever. The prospect of a strike is very remote.

Turks Deny Rumors Of Threatened Attack On the Christians

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 4.—Rumors that there will be anti-Christian demonstrations when the Turkish troops enter Constantinople on Saturday are said by the police to be "the propaganda of an evil-minded element." The fullest protection will be accorded everyone, it is announced, and the arrangements made assure that no disorder will be possible.

B. C. UNIVERSITY'S ROLL INCREASES

VANCOUVER, Oct. 4.—Students are still registering at the University of British Columbia, and although a record has already been set this year for attendance, several more are expected to enroll during the coming week.

The figures given out yesterday at the university show a total of 1,247 men and women taking lectures at the college here. The last year was 1,014, the registration this session showing an increase of 233.

How to have beautiful hair

For really beautiful and attractive hair, just follow this simple method:

Dissolve a tablespoonful of Lux into a gallon of very hot water. Which is a pleasant surprise. Cool down with cold water, then work the lather through the hair thoroughly, rubbing the scalp briskly with the tips of the fingers. Rinse with fresh water, gradually cooling it. Dry by gently rubbing—in the sun, if possible—but not with strong heat.

Sold only in sealed packets—Anti-Proof.

The Discreet Mr. Asquith

There are no spicy revelations or piquant anecdotes in Mr. Asquith's apology. He is correct almost to a fault, and when he seeks for evidence he goes not to mysterious drawers and compromising state documents, but to the authorities who have already taken the public into their confidence—to Kausky, the ex-Kaiser, M. Poincaré, and Count Cernin. No one can accuse Mr. Asquith of using his privileged position for furthering his own personal or political fortunes. When he does seek the support of the archives it is only after an appeal to some responsible official like Sir William Tyrrell, and the only sections of the book which, so far as we know, are "new" are some interesting extracts from the statements made by Ministers like Mr. Churchill and Sir Edward Grey (to whom the book is dedicated) to Dominion premiers.

Mr. Churchill's statement to the Committee of Imperial Defence on July 11, 1912, attended by Mr. (now Sir) Robert Borden and four of his colleagues, on the subject of the German naval menace, throws a lurid light on the antipathies which German naval expansion was causing the Admiralty. Here is one of his points: "Mr. Asquith, perhaps feeling that 'impressions' of celebrities have been somewhat overdone in recent years, is very reserved, and when he does unbend, it is invariably in a footnote. It is clear that he had a great admiration for King Edward VII. His high opinion of Marshal von Bismarck seems a little excessive, and he is convinced that if he had remained in London 'there would have been no European War in 1914.' He gives an amusing account of a conversation he had with the Kaiser at Buckingham Palace in 1911 during his visit to attend the unveiling of the memorial to Queen Victoria."

"He asked me if I had read the book to which I have already referred, recently published by Houston Chamberlain, a German subject of English extraction, 'The Foundations of the Nineteenth Century.' I replied that I had dipped into it without being greatly impressed. He reproached me good-humoredly for my lack of insight, and (evidently regarding the book himself as in the nature of a new gospel) he proceeded with much eloquence to decant on its central theme—the dominance of race as the main factor in history. Chamberlain maintained (if I remember right), among other things, that Christ was not a Jew, and that the Germans are the real 'chosen people.' The Emperor appeared to be preoccupied by the Yellow Peril, and looked, as the only possible safeguard for civilization against it, to the combined action of the white peoples."

And in a footnote: "In the course of the same talk the Emperor told me that not a single commissioned officer in his army was a Jew. I felt constrained to point out that the Jews had their compensations; amongst other things, they had captured and controlled the larger part of the German press. He did not dissent."

One admirable trait in the book, as in the public career of Mr. Asquith, is his loyalty and generosity to subordinates. It is one proof among many of his possession of that chivalry which is still the main qualification for the title of gentleman.

Though the book, then, is not a mine of new and startling facts, it is a weighty, persuasive, and enduring apology for British diplomacy in those momentous years which preceded the Great War. For that very reason it is a crushing exposure and condemnation of Germany. Mr. Asquith here is not the advocate but the judge, and his authority is all the more powerful for it. He brings to his task a judicial mind, a serenity of temper, and also the first-hand knowledge of one who was one of the principal actors in the counterparty. His book is the counterpart of M. Poincaré's "The Origins of the War." The French statesman approached the great theme mainly from the angle of the Balkan intrigue with which he was called upon to deal in 1913. Mr. Asquith is mainly, though not entirely, concerned with the attempt of Germany to wrest from Great Britain the supremacy of the seas. But, starting from different standpoints, the two lawyer statesmen reach the same conclusions and concur in the same verdict. To read, in Mr. Asquith's dispassionate chapters, of those desperate efforts to avoid the catastrophe affects the mind like reading the letters of those who have loved and lost. The story, as told again in those precise pages, is moving and strange, and almost forbidding, but through it all the bright

A letter has been received by the Victoria branch of the Navy League from the Assistant Deputy Minister of Marine and Fisheries assuring the local body that the Department had not altered its intentions to place a lifesaving vessel on the West Coast of Vancouver Island this winter. The Navy League has been maintaining correspondence on the question for some time with the Ottawa officials, pressing the matter.

EMPRESS OF ASIA SAILS FOR ORIENT

BUSINESS RUIN AT YOKOHAMA DRAWS COMMERCIAL MEN

Col. Palmer, First V.A.D. Commander in France, Goes to Offer Service to Japan Relief

With 500 passengers, including 200 sailors, the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Asia sailed for the Orient last night at 7 o'clock.

Those boarding the big steamer here included Col. C. B. Palmer, C.B.E., of London and Newcastle, commander of the North of England division of the St. John Ambulance Association, who was in Victoria for a day or two before sailing. While here he met Mr. A. J. Dallan, Mr. H. W. Edwards and Dr. Denton C. Holmes, leaders in local St. John work. Col. Palmer is well known for his war work of this nature. He took the first detachment of V.A.D.'s to France in October, 1914, meeting the first wounded from the first battle of Ypres on the pier at Boulogne, and setting to work on the spot relieving their pain. Later he organized the Seine hospital barge service. His wife, who accompanied him out on the Ada yesterday, was also prominent in humanitarian work during the war, and was at the big hospital at Gatehead for a long period. Although making the trip to the Orient primarily in course of a leisurely tour of the world, Col. Palmer said he intended on arrival in Japan to offer his services to the Yokohama relief authorities.

Other well-known passengers on the Asia were: Col. J. A. Smith, of London, a Salvation Army officer, en route to China to attend the Chinese Congress at Peking in place of Gen. Bramwell Booth, who is unable to attend in person; Dr. H. P. Brown, of Toronto, a young Canadian who has secured the post of professor of biology at the University of Changtu, accompanied by his wife; Mr. Thomas M. Fairbanks, vice-president of the Japan Paper Company, of New York, accompanied by Mr. Herbert Hill, his Yokohama manager, on a business trip to Japan; and Mr. J. R. Harper, thirty-two years with the T. Eaton Company, of Toronto, going out to Japan to re-establish the firm's shattered Japanese business. This Canadian firm had a big buying establishment in Yokohama, which was totally destroyed by the earthquake.

Another passenger was Mr. J. H. Green, Shanghai representative of Thomas Cook & Son, the globetrotter. Mr. Green said that no fewer than twenty-three members of the firm's Yokohama staff had perished in the recent disaster. He is hurrying back to the Orient to get the company on its feet again in Japan. His first duty, he said, is to see that proper care is taken of the dependents of the dead employees.

Thirty tons of relief cargo were taken out by the Empress for the Red Cross in Japan.

EMPRESS MAKES PORT MONDAY

The Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Asia is due Monday morning on schedule from the Orient. The vessel called at the remains of Yokohama on her way from Hong Kong and sailed therefrom at her usual sailing hour last Saturday. She gained no time, therefore, in the Orient and is not expected to make her appearance at quarantine before Monday.

ADMIRAL LINE REVISES SCHEDULE FOR WINTER

Steamers to Leave Victoria Thursday Nights for South-Ship in From South Every Week

With the tying up for the winter of the steamer H. F. Alexander, the fast Seattle-San Francisco flyer, the entire coastwise schedule of the Admiral Line has been revised. The new schedule, received yesterday by the Victoria office of the company, shows that the changes will be of benefit to Victoria, as hereafter the vessel will sail from this port for the south on Thursday evenings. In the past they have taken their departure on Sunday mornings, when the street cars have been idle, and the wharves, in consequence, difficult to reach for many people.

Another advantage of the new schedule is that Victoria will have a northbound steamer in every week, as well as a southbound. Heretofore the fortnightly arrivals of the Dorothy Alexander have been the only direct connections with San Francisco. Henceforth the Ruth Alexander, as well as the Dorothy, will call at Victoria northbound.

The new schedule will come into effect at Victoria with the arrival of the Dorothy Alexander here from San Francisco at 8 p.m. Monday, October 15. She will sail southbound the following Thursday, her sailing hour from Victoria being 9 p.m. She will reach San Francisco at 4 a.m. Sunday, at Los Angeles, 4 p.m. Tuesday, and at San Diego at 8 p.m. Wednesday, of the next week. Returning she will dock at Victoria every second Monday night.

The schedule of the Ruth Alexander will be, in general, the same as the Dorothy's. She will sail from Victoria for the south at 9 p.m. Thursday, alternating with the latter ship, will reach San Francisco at the same hour, but will be a few hours later in making Los Angeles. Northbound she will not reach Victoria before Tuesday mornings, instead of Monday nights like the Dorothy.

The steamer Admiral Dewey and Admiral Farragut, plying between Seattle and San Francisco direct, will in future sail from Seattle at 5 p.m. on alternate Mondays, instead of at midnight Thursdays. The Admiral Dewey is leaving Seattle at midnight Saturday on one special trip to San Francisco.

PRESIDENT LINER IS DUE TOMORROW

MADISON DOCKING FROM THE ORIENT SATURDAY

Grant Sailing Outbound This Afternoon—Fifty-Two Passengers Join Steamer Here

The Admiral-Donaldson liner President Madison, Captain T. P. Quinn, will make port tomorrow, the Admiral Line was advised yesterday from Seattle headquarters. The vessel is due at quarantine about two o'clock in the afternoon, but may be later. According to her schedule she is not due before Monday, but the elimination of Yokohama as a port of call has apparently enabled her to make her appearance two days ahead of time. She is bringing three hundred passengers from the Orient.

Outward bound, the President Grant, of this line, will be in port today. She is due from Seattle in mid-afternoon, and will sail at 5 p.m. for Seattle. Two first-class passengers and fifty Chinese steerage passengers will join the vessel here. The former are Mr. and Mrs. James C. Thompson, of Shanghai, who have been spending the summer months in the vicinity of Victoria, and are now returning to their Oriental home.

The President Madison sailed from Yokohama for Kobe the day before the earthquake in Japan. Immediately following the disaster the vessel carried two thousand tons of cereals from Kobe to the earthquake-stricken city of Yokohama.

Passengers aboard the President Madison include the following: H. D. Adams, general manager of the Union Construction Company of San Francisco; J. F. Buckley, Oriental manager of the Columbia Pacific Shipping Company, Portland; and wife; E. H. Coie, manager of the American Trading Company, Tientsin; and wife; J. F. Donnelly, president of Donnelly & Co., Grand Rapids, Mich.; H. C. Jackson, of the Standard Oil Company, Shanghai, and wife; Otis Johnson, manager of the Long Bell Lumber Company, Kansas City; and wife; H. C. Murray, manager of the Keas & Murray advertising firm, New York City; H. E. Nelson, president of Nelson & Co., Manila, and wife; H. C. Nelson, of the American American vice-consul, Foochow, wife and two children; J. W. Smith, chief accountant of the American Trading Company for the Orient; A. B. Kelly, a prominent lawyer of Manila; C. W. Iglehart, head of the Baptist Mission in Japan, wife and three children; Mrs. J. S. Rubie, wife of the Oriental manager of the General Electric Company.

Dorothy Alexander Makes Fine Voyage

The Dorothy Alexander, in the coastwise service of the Admiral Line, arrived from San Francisco last night at 6:30 o'clock. The vessel made an exceptionally fast trip, approaching in fact, her best time for the distance. Capt. Harris, master of the steamer, reported good weather conditions. What wind there was blew from the south, helping him along.

FOG SIGNALS UNRELIABLE SAY WRECK WITNESSES

Siberian Prince Inquiry Begins—Captain and Second Officer Testify Here Unheard

Is Race Rocks fog alarm, skirted on their voyage by the biggest ships which ply the Pacific, the safe aid to navigation it should be; or, when fog sets down and seafarers have great need of roaring warning beacons, does Nature play tricks with the Race Rocks diaphane and make the hazards of navigation doubly dangerous in that vicinity?

This is the somewhat startling question which seemingly arises as a result of yesterday's testimony before Capt. J. D. Macpherson, wreck commissioner, and Capt. Basil Combe and Capt. H. Mowat, nautical assessors, at the opening session of the postoffice of the investigation into the stranding of the Siberian Prince Line steamer, Siberian Prince, on Bentinck Island in the early morning of Sunday, July 29.

Headed by Capt. Robert Milliken, master of the Siberian Prince, who was himself on the bridge when the ship struck, on the stand yesterday said that he heard no sound from the Race Rocks fog station. His evidence was corroborated by second officer, William Anderson, who was also on the bridge at the time of the mishap, and who said that he, too, heard nothing.

Both men declared further that, subsequent to the accident, during the two weeks when the vessel remained on the rocks, the behavior of the fog signals from Race Rocks was decidedly peculiar, in two frequent foggy weather that then prevailed, the horn could be heard at times clearly, at times faintly, and at times not at all.

"Sometimes," said Capt. Milliken, "light blasts could be heard now and again, every ten or fifteen minutes. Then again at times it could be heard quite clearly."

He had never heard any mention of irregularities of this nature at Race Rocks, he said, prior to the stranding. Since that time, however, several people had told him that such vagaries previously had not been unknown thereabouts.

Captain Testifies

Captain Milliken and Mr. Anderson were the only witnesses heard yesterday, the former being on the stand all morning and for an hour in the afternoon. He described the vessel's departure from Tacoma and her movements until she struck Bentinck Island at 1:44 a.m. the following day. There was no question, he agreed with Captain Macpherson, that he had passed within half a mile of Race Rocks. He had not, however, heard the horn.

"If I had heard Race Rocks," he said, "I would certainly have turned about and gone the other way."

The following extracts from the log, covering the hours immediately prior to the ship striking, were entered in the captain's evidence: 11:30 p.m. came in dense fog; engines at stand-by; 11:45 p.m. New Dungeness fog siren sounding abeam; 12:15 a.m. heard Ediz Hook fog siren about five points on port bow; 12:17 a.m. reduced to half speed; 12:30 a.m. Race Rocks fog siren sounding abeam, 32 altered course S. 81 W.; 12:35 a.m. observed standard compass deviation 3 deg. west; 12:50 a.m. S. 83 W.; 1 a.m. full speed; 1:00 a.m. engines at stand-by; 1:15 a.m. took cast, 77 fathoms, dark gravel bottom, log 30, half speed; 1:30 a.m. mile of Race Rocks, dark gravel bottom, log 32; 1:40 a.m. sighted loom of land on port bow, engines full speed, full speed astern and helm hard a-port; 1:44 a.m. vessel struck bottom easily, engines still going astern; lifeline swung out and lowered to raise; vessel wounded fore and aft; No. 1 and 4 tanks and No. 4 port bilge making water; 1:50 a.m. stopped engines, watertight doors closed; 1:55 a.m. stopped engines on account of injection being choked.

The Second Officer Mr. Anderson, second officer of the Siberian Prince for the past year, and five years with the company, said that he came on watch at midnight. He presented the following written statement of what happened:

"I came on watch at midnight. There was a fresh W.S.W. breeze (true). Sky was clear overhead, but a heavy ground fog prevailed, which obscured all shore lights. Captain and third officer were on the bridge. Engineer-room telegraph was at stand-by. Compass (by standard compass) was S. 61 W. and by steering compass, S. 60 W. It being intended to make S. 63 W. magnetic course, 3 degrees west being allowed for deviation and 5 degrees for a possible northerly set. These courses were given me by third officer, who drew my attention to New Dungeness fog siren which we could plainly hear astern sounding two blasts with alternate intervals of 12 and 39 seconds. I checked the standard and steering compasses and found the same difference of 1 degree between them. I proceeded to keep a careful lookout and to listen for fog signals, and also sounded steam whistle in accordance with regulations. The captain cautioned me to listen attentively for the diaphane fog signal on Race Rocks, and for Ediz Hook fog siren.

"At 12:15 we heard Ediz Hook fog siren, one blast every 40 seconds, loud and clear, about five points on port bow. New Dungeness fog siren was still audible about directly astern.

"At 12:17 reduced to half speed.

Stars Consulted

"At 12:30 Ediz Hook sounded loudly and distinctly, bearing S. 29 E. by compass, patent log reading 33. Between the approximate 5-point bearing and the approximate bearing abeam we estimated that the vessel had traveled 1.5 miles. From a table of natural tangents on the chartroom, bulkhead 1 calculated that our theoretical distance from the fog signal was 2.2 miles. The captain decided to assume the distance from the fog siren as 2.5 miles. Course altered to S. 81 W. by standard and steering compasses, corresponding to S. 78 W. magnetic. Compasses were checked and no difference was found to exist between them. When vessel had become settled upon her new course I observed, at 12:35, Acturus and Polaris for compass deviation. Their true bearings were N. 70, 7 deg. W. and N. 1, 7 deg. E. respectively. Captain Milliken attended to lookout and whistle while I calculated the deviation, which was practically 3 deg. West by both observations.

"At 12:35 the course was altered to S. 83 deg. W. by both compasses, corresponding to S. 82 deg. W. magnetic, patent log reading 27. The compasses were compared and again found to read the same. The deviation allowed was 3 deg. west, as on previous courses.

"At 12:58, speed was increased to full. Ediz Hook fog siren was heard distinctly and regularly, and apparently well astern in direction of the vessel.

"At 1:00 engine-room telegraph was rung to stand-by.

"At 1:15, patent log 30, speed was reduced to half. I took cast of lead by bridge-sounding machine. The scale indicated 75 fathoms, with two fathoms to add for barometer correction. We reckoned on one fathom to be subtracted to reduce to value of mean low water spring tides. The lead showed dark sandy gravel. I reported the sounding to captain.

"At 1:30 took cast of lead. The scale indicated 75 fathoms. The same corrections were considered as in the first cast. Patent log read 32.

"At 1:40, while I was on the lower bridge and about to drop lead for another cast, I heard a long blast upon our steam whistle, followed by three short blasts. Believing that another vessel was close upon us, I left the sounding machine, and as I hurried up the bridge ladder the captain asked me if I could indicate when came the echo of our whistle. Before I had time to reply we both sighted the loom of land upon port bow, and instantly ordered the helm hard a-port. Capt. Milliken put the engine-room telegraph full astern practically at the same moment.

"At 1:44, the vessel took the bottom easily, the engine still going astern."

The three whistles, Capt. Milliken explained, were sounded when he thought he detected an echo to the regular fog signal the ship was giving out, in an effort to determine whether or not his ears were mistaken.

The inquiry will continue at the postoffice today at 10:30 a.m., when other members of the crew will be heard. Local marine men and employees of the Marine Department acquainted with the aids to navigation hereabouts will also testify during the course of the investigation.

AMERICAN SHIPS LOSING MILLIONS

BUT U.S. FLAG IS ON THE SEAS TO REMAIN

Shipping Board Anxious to Sell or Lease—Two Million Dropped Yearly on London Route

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 4.—If the United States Shipping Board cannot sell its fleet of nearly forty passenger liners and more than 1,200 freight boats, it will attempt to lease them as the next step, and will continue to operate them in the event the leasing plan fails, Meyer Isamer, a member of the board said in an address today before the Commercial Club.

"For a generation at least we must give up the idea of government aid to the merchant marine," Isamer said. "The government is losing approximately 2,000,000 a year in its operation of the service between New York and London. Thus far approximately 150,000 a voyage has been lost in the shipping board service between the west coast of the United States and the east coast of South America."

"At one time the shipping board made more than $200,000,000 out of the operation of its vessels. I look for the return of this favorable condition."

Isamer E. Itaney, Portland, Ore., another member of the board, told the meeting that the government didn't propose ever again to be at the mercy of foreign commerce.

"The shipping board spent $50,000,000 last year," he said. "We hope to keep it down to $25,000,000 this year. I do not think that we can sell the board's fleet now."

"I think it is unfortunate that we ever tried to put the subsidy bill through," The American people don't like subsidies."
